Why do Christians feel wrong for thinking about more money?

It's important to note that beliefs and attitudes vary among individuals, even within the same religious group. However, some Christians may feel conflicted about thinking excessively about money due to certain teachings and principles in Christianity.

Christian teachings often emphasize values such as humility, selflessness, and the dangers of placing too much importance on material wealth. For example, the Bible includes passages that caution against the love of money and the potential negative impact it can have on one's spiritual well-being.

One well-known biblical verse is 1 Timothy 6:10, which states, "For the love of money is the root of all evil." This is interpreted by some Christians as a warning against prioritizing wealth over spiritual and ethical considerations.

It's important to recognize that interpretations and beliefs can vary, and not all Christians may feel the same way about thinking about money. Additionally, many Christians also acknowledge the importance of responsible stewardship and using financial resources for charitable purposes and the well-being of others.

Credit:	The ability of a customer to obtain goods or services before payment, based on the trust that payment will be made in the future. If you have good credit, as shown by your previous financial behavior, then it's easier to borrow money.
Key Take Away:	"Having good credit makes it easier to do many things, including rent an apartment or buy a home or car; sign up for a cell phone plan; or get a student loan. With good credit, you can even save money in the form of lower interest rates or waived fees and down payments when setting up utilities."

The 70/30 Rule:	“After you pay your fair share of taxes, learn to live on 70 percent of your after-tax income. These are the necessities and luxuries you spend money on.”
Charity:	“One-third should go to charity. Charity is the act of giving back to the community and helping those who need assistance.” As church members we give TITHES and offerings.
Capital Investment:	“The next 10 percent of your after-tax income, you’re going to create wealth. This is money you’ll use to buy, fix, manufacture or sell. The key is to engage in commerce, even if only on a part-time basis. Buy/Sell products, Real Estate, Start a Part-time business.”
Savings:	The last 10 percent should be put into SAVINGS. “Consider this to be one of the most exciting parts of your wealth plan because it can offer you peace of mind by preparing you for the “winters” of life.”
Jim Rohn stated: “Let me give you the definition of “rich” and “poor”: Poor people spend their money and save what’s left. Rich people save their money and spend what’s left.
