RE: YAX and PREGER vs. Wellness, etc. Corporation and Stephen Frazer

Mr. Altig,

More than a month has passed since we responded to your initial letter. We have not received any additional correspondence from your office while we have received a mountain of often incoherent, false, vulgar, vicious, ranting memos from your clients. These memos are all being presented to the Las Vegas Metro Officers assigned to the criminal complaints and soon the civil case against your clients. The Metro Officers have stated they have contacted mental health professionals ... particularly in response to one memo where Yax refers to my death ... a thinly veiled murder threat.

In my 25 years of managing businesses, I have never experienced anything that can be compared to this situation. Then again, I have never before encountered anyone with a 25-year cocaine addiction.

While the Wellness, etc. Corporation is not obligated to repurchase our stock from your clients, we have formally declared these stockholders have executed actions that resulted in calamities which have gravely impacted our operations, corporation net worth, public image and reputation.

We are in the process of placing their combined $35K (current stock value) in an escrow account where it is also tagged as settlement funds in the civil litigation against Yax and Preger. The funds will remain in escrow until a settlement has been agreed upon, else the court issues a directive. Our attorneys are suggesting the court directive will far exceed the $35K ... by something over $2M.

To again share our legal position, we have identified 12 actionable issues against your clients and we are now moving forward with filings.

Mr. Altig, we are at a loss to understand the true motivations of your clients. Frankly, negatively impacting the operations and fair market value of a corporation in which one has already invested suggests a profound critical thinking challenge, else, they are engaged in some other enterprise. The Metro Officers assigned to the criminal investigation recently presented a security video from a past Wellness, etc. fabrication vendor who is currently being criminally prosecuted for Conspiracy to Defraud, Grand Theft and Extortion. It makes us ponder if this is the true motivation for Yax's actions? He is operating as an agent for someone currently being criminally prosecuted?

Again, we trust as an attorney you will educate your clients and calculate the debt your clients now owe our company based on relative Case Law directives. We await the compensation check from which they may deduct their now $35,000 combined total in our company stock value. This will halt the legal actions which now total in the millions of dollars.

Also, included is the response to a recent Yax request. Yax appears to be confused as to how our clinic operates (he made a medical records request). For the duration of when Yax was receiving sessions in our clinic, we were a registered Spa. We did not become a medical clinic until July 1, 2024. The fact that his primary mission while working for our company was to help us migrate from Spa to Medical Clinic, but then he sends a medical records request yet again reflects Yax's compromised mental faculties.

The narrative below provides additional insight to this record:

Eric Yax (46, 320lbs, 6'-4") failed to fill out our clinic's Services Application properly and completely, withholding critically important information about his medical condition and medical history. We provided him a session on a red light device targeting lipolysis (fat loss) that over 200 other clients had used (totaling several thousand sessions) with excellent success and without incident. Yax's treatment duration and tissue distance from the lights were consistent with the thousands of other treatments for our other clients.

As the result of the anti-psychotic medication Yax was taking at the time, he was hyper-sensitive to light in general. This condition and sensitivity would have been presented by his healthcare provider to Yax and it would be expected that exposure to any light, including the sun, would generate a similar response.

At Yax's request, Leora, the Wellness, etc. Attendant on duty that day, helped Yax off the device near the end of the treatment session onto a chair in the treatment room. We encouraged Yax to move less than 10ft from the treatment room into a restroom where he would be able to better recover from the drug's effects, but he refused. Yax refused our repeated offer to call emergency services. Yax refused to move from the treatment room for 4 hours resulting in the cancelling of 7 other scheduled client treatments. We provided Yax cold presses, water, electrolyte fluids and ultimately, he did vomit slightly - shortly after drinking almost all of a 24oz bottle of Gatoraid.

Yax eventually walked out of the treatment room into a restroom where he stayed another 15 minutes. He then walked out of our clinic after a brief discussion about properly presenting medical conditions on clinic services applications.

Even after this event, Yax continued to withhold critical medical and drug addiction history that would negatively impact both the potential efficacy and result in potential negative impact to his own health from all treatments performed by a Biophotonics Clinic.

Narrative: Yax requested a session for lipolysis (fat loss). We put him on a device that had provided over 200 other clients several thousand sessions without event. Yax became extremely nauseated near the end of his 24 minute session at about the 20 minute mark. Our attendant stopped the treatment and Yax walked over to the dressing area chair and sat there for nearly 4 hours. He refused emergency services, he refused to move to a restroom, he refused to move at all. We provided him water, a cold press and electrolytes. Yax vomited once per 2 witnesses and the volume in the trash container that we provided him. While he claimed to be nauseous for nearly 4 hours, he was sitting up in a chair for the duration and was talking and coherent for the duration (else we would have called emergency services regardless of his direction). When he was walking out of our clinic, we pressured him to explain why he had a unique response from our device. He then shared that he was taking a medication and was able to provide the name of the drug which we looked up and discovered was an anti-psychotic with the common side effect of hyper light sensitivity. Yax still did not provide us his true medical condition at that time.

Yax misrepresented his true medical condition and therefore placed himself and our clinic at risk. Also, the fact that Yax could walk the 10 steps from the device to the chair, but not move 10ft to a private restroom, lost us $300 in services revenue and performance embarrassment from 7 other clients that day. Rumors spread that someone had become ill from the device and several clients did not return. We calculate our lost income due to this event at over $5,000.

Due to all the lies, false information, vicious and vulgar attacks, both Yax and Preger have been barred from services in all of our clinics. After providing several thousand unique clients nearly 250,000 treatments, there have been no other events by any other client that even approaches the impact that Yax has conferred on our organization.

Please inform your clients that we will not interact directly with them and they need to stop sending memos, texts, email, etc. With the creation of the escrow account, they are no longer stockholders in our company, but defendants in a litigation case.

Sincerely,

Stephen Frazer
