

I have been a strong believer throughout my career in alternatives to litigation and looking after one's psychological needs just as one does for one's physical and financial condition. With that in mind, I want to recommend to you the services of a Registered Social Worker who specializes in personalized therapy. She is my daughter Lisa whom many of you will remember from the time she worked with me in my Family Law Practice. She has now earned her BA, BSW, MSW and RSW and carries on a successful social work practice.

Certainly, feel free to review the balance of this newsletter to see if Lisa can be of help to you or someone you care about or just to consult her for a personalized completely complimentary initial visit before her practice completely fills up.

If Lisa's personalized therapy services could be of help to you or someone you care about, feel free to contact her for a complimentary initial interview. Not only is she a Registered Social Worker but she is a psychotherapist with a unique background in the performing arts and family law. With her experience she has developed a therapeutic approach that can be creatively customized to your needs. By sharing your issues with Lisa, you will be pleased that she will root for you during your good days and provide caring support on your tough ones.

To learn more about Lisa, you can visit her on Psychology Today, read her blog or visit her website and email her for a no-cost session, where you can discover if you'll be a good fit.
