Policy Highlight…

IMMUNIZATION REQUIREMENTS

All children must have obtained the minimum necessary immunizations required by state law prior to enrollment and must remain current on their immunizations in order to continue attending school.

Parents must produce records showing (1) that the child has been immunized in accordance with the rules; (2) the child has an exemption from immunization requirements in accordance with the rules; or (3) that the child is entitled to provisional enrollment.

Acceptance documentation of immunizations is any record of immunizations validated by a physician or his/her designee, or public health personnel. The record must show the month, day, and year when each immunization was received.

Did You Know…

The special moments you have with your children can be lasting memories for years to come…take time to think of creative activities that can become traditions for your family. Here are a few ideas that you can incorporate around the holiday time.

Volunteer- Thanksgiving is a great time to give back to your community and help those in need, and it's one of the richest customs you can incorporate into your family's holiday.

Special Breakfast- We know you are busy preparing dinner for the day, but breakfast is an important meal you can't pass up! Try pancakes, or biscuits with gravy, maybe a slice of sweet potato pie and hot chocolate, hey when do you get a chance to have dessert for breakfast and don't feel bad about it!

Morning Walk- It's a nice way to connect to nature and to each other. It's the perfect beginning to a busy and often stressful day.

Table Toast- Have a toast and allow everyone to share one thing they are thankful for. Toddlers can even join in on the fun with their sippy cups.

Special Jobs- Allow the children to assist with different task throughout the day (Setting the table, buttering the rolls, washing dishes, etc.). This gives them the chance to feel included and utilize their self-help skills.
