What is Vietnamese food?

A unique blend of cultural influences has created food with its own distinct personality. Vietnamese cuisine incorporates crisp uncooked vegetables, subtle seasoning and raw herbs to produce unique flavors and textures. Vietnamese food uses very little fat, even in stir fried dishes, and is therefore well suited for today's health conscious diners. Simply stated, Vietnamese food is delicious, light and refreshing.

Pho Vietnamese Noodle Soup

Pho begins with light-bodies boiling hot beef stock. It is a combination of all dried and fresh spices embodied in the cooked choicest of beef, poured over rice noodle and topped with your choice of beef; accompanied by fresh raw bean sprouts, chili peppers, lemon juice and everpresent cilantro and basil leaves.
