Our mission is to empower families to gather strength and clarity toward action and hope.

“Cell Phones: The Dragon In Your Pocket” by Aaron Aldridge

Photos of family and friends, GPS directions to unknown places, and the ability to connect with loved ones instantly—cell phones offer us so many conveniences. But like a two-sided coin, they also come with their challenges.

They can stoke our fear of missing out, draw us away from the people right in front of us, distort our self-image, and sometimes even bring stress and bullying into our homes. As parents, some of us remember navigating junior high and high school with phones tethered to walls, while others recall the pros and cons of having everything and everyone at our fingertips during our own adolescent years.
