

A DIFFERENT MONTH

(Or what to do when you can't do much)

Continuing in Belgium

This is spring break week for one of our campuses. So a team has traveled to Belgium to continue our efforts to plant ministry there. John helped orient the students and volunteers on the team. Their task is to engage Belgian students in gospel conversations. The most meaningful discussions require getting beyond news, weather, and sports. To address heart issues, our student missionaries take risks and ask questions that get below the surface. John's favorite is to ask: "What bothers you most about the world?" Often that question leads to a discussion about what might be some solutions. For us, those solutions include God and the gospel.

Prayer needed

In April we will be running the online presentation of our A Common Call faculty conference. Our hope is to involve some of our Indianapolis professors.

So far this month . . .

John's ministry assignment has been to heal. Jenny's has been to grieve, sort, and recover from a challenging 2025 so far. With her dad's passing in January and working with her brother to manage their mom's situation, it is amazing that she has already been able to reach out her professor friends here in Indianapolis.

As campus missionaries we want to be faithful to our call at this time. Slowly we're returning to the usual appointment schedule, meeting with involved professors for early morning coffee or midday Zoom meetings. John made some new friends last week when a student appointment didn't show. Professor V, chair of the Hispanic studies department, was free to chat. And Cathy, an older woman who works as a curriculum assistant for the Geography department, had a great deal of interesting information.

We are navigating life's challenges while seeking to build spiritual movement on campus. But this is always the situation, whether we're raising children, working on advanced degrees or recovering from surgery. In everything God is faithful. He has promised that His word will not return void, but will accomplish the purpose for which He sent it (Isaiah 55:11). This promise motivates us to persevere. Thank you for your part in helping us to be faithful to His call.
