

Remembering Dr. King

Today we are apart of a world-wide community that has paused to remember the man who had a dream and changed the lives of millions for the better

The Year of His Birth

What Dr King had in common with Daddy and Mother Lewter was that all were born in the year 1929 which included:

- Trotsky is Expelled from Russia
- Lateran Treaty is signed
- Valentine's Day Massacre
- Stock Market Crashes

What He is Remembered Most for

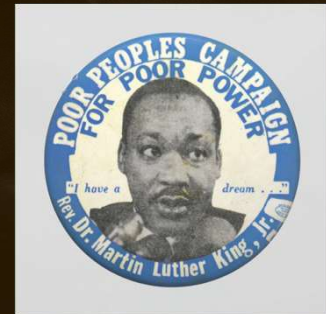

Without a doubt, what Dr. King is remembered most for was his "I Have a Dream" speech that he delivered on the steps of the Washington Memorial in 1963

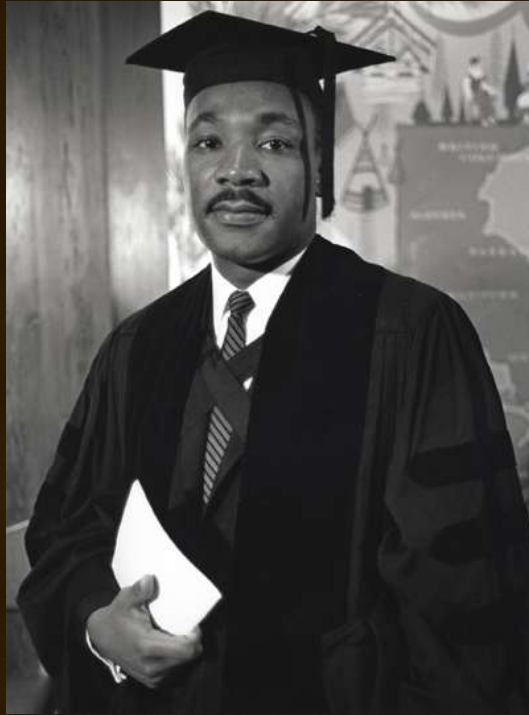

What is Most Forgotten About Dr. King

What most people Have forgotten about Dr. King was his stance and posture at the end of his life which was his opposition to the war in Viet Nam and his design of the "Poor People's Campaign

The Choice that he Made

With a Ph. D. from Boston University Dr. King did not have to go into civil rights. He could have become a Black college president. He could have been elected president of a Baptist convention, he could have landed a prestigious pastorate in a major city. But he took up the cause of Civil Rights because of his moral conviction

He Expanded the Dream

It is speculated that Dr. King would have remained alive if he had confined his commentary to race relations and civil rights and had not wandered into foreign policy and international affairs. But prophets are not called to be comfortable and say only what is convenient. They are accountable to a higher power.

The Prophet Joel

It was the Prophet Joel that said that in the coming days your young men will have vision and your old men shall dream dreams

A Touching Story

What few people know is that Dr. King was a “Trekkie”. When the series Star Trek appeared on broadcast TV, September 8, 1966, he enjoyed watching the weekly show with his children.
