THE YEAR IN REVIEW
2022

During the year, the task of providing a readable transcript of the trial, originally digitized by Luke Kummer in 2019, has been handled admirably by British researcher Michael Banks for the readership of

The plausible explanation as to why, contrary to the general belief of casual and on occasion, serious researchers, that Ameer Ben Ali was pardoned when in fact he wasn't was brought up by Danish researcher Peter Daamgard during this year. It was a compromise in order to satisfy the group who felt Ali was innocent all along and a political move which didn't cast aspersions on the prosecution back in 1891. Ali was released and was immediately deported.

The individual mentioned in Edwin Borchard's 1932 book who attracted the attention of a conductor on the Central Jersey Railroad was finally given an appropriate name, Train Man, by Canadian researcher Mark Franzoi.

A photo of John R. Lee was located by Nina Brown in March.

A photo of George Damon was located in March of this year, as well.
