Wrestler Profiles

EL MONGOL

(written by Al Getz)

For several decades following World War II, professional wrestling in North America was seemingly overrun with stereotypical German and Japanese heels. With that said, plenty of wrestlers billed themselves from equally faraway but less transparently jingoistic locales. Numerous grapplers over the years claimed to be from Mongolia, a nation perhaps most famous for the founder of the Mongol Empire, Genghis Khan. Canadian-born Archie Gouldie found great success as the Mongolian Stomper. In addition, numerous wrestlers billed themselves as "The Mongol" or slight variations of that name.

El Mongol with promoter Paul Jones

But if you ask any Georgia Championship Wrestling fan of the late 60s and early 70s, they may very well tell you there was only one Mongolian in wrestling that mattered, and that was El Mongol.

Raul Molina was born in Chihuahua, Mexico in 1930 and turned pro in the early 1950s. He spent several years wrestling in Mexico, including regular appearances in Guadalajara for promoter Elias Simon Kuri. His earliest documented appearances in the U.S. were in Western States Sports (Amarillo) in 1960. After a few years wrestling mostly in the western half of the country and in western Canada, he ventured east and first came to Georgia in December 1966.

He found great success in the Peach State, initially as a heel and then as a babyface. His biggest feud as a heel was with Mr. Wrestling (Tim Woods), though he also had a series of matches with Louie Tillet in the first half of 1968. Mongol turned babyface in early July after he & Tarzan Tyler lost tag team bouts to Alberto & Ramon Torres on consecutive days, first in the finals of a tournament to crown new Georgia Tag Team champions and then in a return bout on TV. Tyler and manager Dandy Jack Crawford viciously attacked Mongol afterwards, blaming him for their losses. Mongol would spend the next couple of years feuding with wrestlers such as Paul DeMarco, Buddy Colt, and Nick Bockwinkel.

As 1971 began, El Mongol was positioned as one of the top babyfaces in the territory. During the year, he had four separate runs as a tag team champion (winning each of the three active titles in the territory at least once) and had a four-month run as Georgia Heavyweight champ.

His singles title reign came by virtue of winning a one-night tournament in February. After receiving a bye in the first round, Mongol defeated Luke Graham, Assassin #2, and Nick Bockwinkel in succession to win the title. His reign came to an end in early June at the hands of a man he faced many times during the year, Buddy Colt. In Macon, Mongol and Colt had four singles bouts in an eight-week period (and in two of the other weeks they were on opposite sides of tag bouts). A Texas death match on March 16th was won by Mongol, but the Macon blowoff came several weeks later. That match, a fence match with no time limit where you had to win two straight falls in order to claim victory, was also won by Mongol.

In the tag team ranks, Mongol & Bob Armstrong won the Macon Tag Team titles from the Assassins in January, holding them through October. Mongol & Armstrong also had two brief runs with the Southeastern Tag Team titles (which were recognized solely in the Georgia towns promoted by Fred Ward), first winning them in a one-night tournament in February and later in the year defeating the Assassins for another go-round. Mongol teamed with Ray Gunkel to hold the Georgia Tag Team titles for a couple of months in the spring, winning them from (and subsequently losing them back to) the Assassins.

Big John (aka Big Bad John) was another frequent opponent of El Mongol's during 1971. In Atlanta, they squared off for three straight weeks in July. Their first match on July 16th went to a no-contest. The rematch the following week was a Texas death match, won by Big John. Some level of shenanigans likely occurred during that match, as they were rematched a week later, once again in a Texas death match but this time with the ring enclosed in wire. The third time was the charm for Mongol, as he finally defeated John. They had a two-match series in Columbus and in Griffin, and the blowoff in each of those towns was also a Texas death match with the ring enclosed in wire. El Mongol won the Columbus match; while no results are available for Griffin, it's probably a safe bet to say Mongol won the blowoff there as well.

Despite holding every title available in the state at some point in 1971, El Mongol finished the year with no gold around his waist. He had been a fixture in the state for most of the last five years and had faced many of the same names year in and year out. It's possible fans grew weary of the stale roster and may have wanted to see a huge shakeup. Later in 1972, due to circumstances nobody could have seen coming, they got exactly that.

THE ASSASSINS

(written by David Gibb; David is a writer and author of "How to Ace Your Comeback")

Dozens of competitors in the 1960s and '70s were "Assassins" for a night or a couple of weeks, but when wrestlers and historians discuss The Masked Assassins, they're invariably talking about the team of Jody Hamilton and Tom Renesto.

Like so many of wrestling's greatest and best-drawing gimmicks, The Assassins were born out of a great mind's remix of an idea that had already worked once before. In this case, the inspiration was "The Great Bolo" Al Lovelock, a major star out west in the 1950s, and the mind was Tom Renesto.

In 1958, Renesto became Lovelock's tag team partner in Jim Crockett Promotions. As "The Great Bolo" and "The Mighty Bolo," Lovelock and Renesto were effectively proto-Assassins. They were near-twins in their ring attire and innovated many of the heel tag team spots and misdirections that would become standard storytelling beats in matches of the '70s and '80s. In spite of their success in the Carolinas, Lovelock was a westerner at heart and playing out the back nine of his career. When he decided to leave Crockett, he agreed to allow his partner Renesto to assume his mantle as "The Great Bolo," either in the Carolinas or the east generally, depending on who you believe.

Following Lovelock's exit, Renesto took Larry Hamilton ("The Missouri Mauler") as his tag team partner in 1959. The two were vicious and effective heels but, of note, not masked twins like The Bolos. Two years later, Renesto made Larry's younger brother Joe (called Jody) into the new Mighty Bolo. In Crockett, Renesto and Jody Hamilton were "The Bolos" thanks to the name Lovelock and Renesto had established previously, but everywhere else, they were The Assassins (perhaps due to Lovelock reconsidering his generosity and getting litigious). They became the undisputed tag team of the 1960s.

By 1971, The Assassins were two of wrestling's biggest and most relied-upon stars, especially in the Southeast, where they were based out of Georgia Championship Wrestling. Both Renesto and Hamilton had grown into respected minds, both in terms of in-match psychology and big-arc storytelling. As the year opened, they were Georgia Tag Team champions as well as Macon Tag Team champions.

Like many territories, Georgia's "true" tag teams were almost exclusively heel pairings, with a variety of makeshift alliances of top babyfaces filling out the division. As top heels, The Assassins were frequently feuding with completely different combinations of main event babyfaces in different towns throughout the area. Renesto and Hamilton's ability to have what felt like meaningful feuds and main events that were tailored to each town around the horn with a variety of talent was what made them so incredibly valuable.

In Atlanta, for example, they faced the team of El Mongol and top area star Ray Gunkel four out of six weeks in March and April. Gunkel and Mongol got the better of The Assassins with a non-title win, but the wily heels retained their belts in the return title match with an intentional disqualification, setting up rematches with barbed wire, Texas Tornado stipulations, and co-promoter/area legend Paul Jones as a guest referee. With the deck properly stacked in favor of goodness, Gunkel and Mongol won the titles, although The Assassins would regain the belts in June before one more big main event with Gunkel and Mongol in August.

About 100 miles away in Columbus, their biggest rivalry was with the team of local heroes "Big" Bill Dromo and Bob Armstrong. As in Atlanta, The Assassins would settle for intentional disqualification losses in their defenses of the Southeastern Tag Titles, eventually earning Dromo and Armstrong a match in which the "no title change on a DQ" rule was waived, allowing the babyfaces to capture the titles when The Assassins resorted to their go-to tactics and were disqualified.

Two weeks later, the teams returned with the DQ rule again suspended and a titles vs. masks stipulation. Each team captured a fall in that match, but time expired, necessitating a rematch with no time limit. Somehow, by the skin of their teeth, The Assassins regained the Southeastern Tag Titles and kept their identities concealed.

As Assassin #2, Jody Hamilton was also the Columbus Heavyweight Champion from June into September, illustrating how essential The Assassins were to getting over the area's top babyfaces in singles matches as well as tags.

Another 100 miles away in Macon, The Assassins tangled with a combination of their Atlanta and Columbus foes: the team of El Mongol and Bob Armstrong. On May 4, Mongol and Armstrong defended the Macon Tag Team Titles, earning them a shot at the masked men's Southeastern Titles. Again, in two consecutive matches, The Assassins frustrated their opponents by accepting DQs rather than fighting to a fair finish.

Throughout this run, it is believed that Georgia's booker was Tom Renesto, the original Assassin (or second Bolo) himself. As Atlanta, Columbus, and Macon all illustrate, Renesto's main strategy was to get heat on The Assassins with intentional DQs and hot finishes to set up big title wins for the hodgepodge babyface teams. He was cashing in the heat equity his team had built as the top heels for several years running to get pops and keep the top stars strong without needing to do anything too fancy.

As 1971 turned into 1972, Tom Renesto and Jody Hamilton probably felt – perhaps rightfully – that Georgia Championship Wrestling was their kingdom. Renesto was a trusted advisor of promoter and 45% owner Ray Gunkel. Hamilton was a top star in both singles and tag team matches. Their successful collaboration with Gunkel over the years had made The Assassins a region- and era-defining team, earning the loyalty the two wrestlers would repay in the coming promotional war.

A look at a week's worth of house shows in the territory.

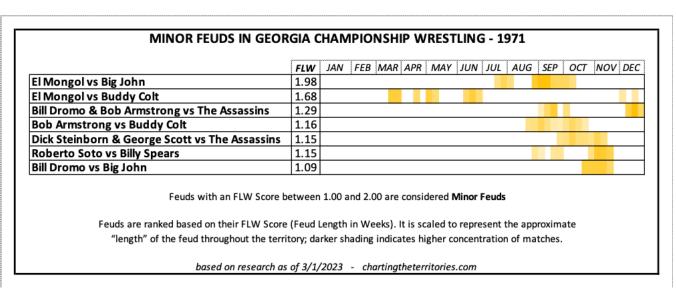

Video available on the Charting the Territories channel on YouTube https://youtu.be/83quhdVdB2E

Feuds

Here are two charts listing the biggest feuds in the territory using a metric called Feud Length in Weeks (FLW for short).

The progression of feuds often differed from city to city. This led to each market having its own narrative. If a main event drew well the first time out in some cities, they could build to a rematch the following week. In other cities where it didn't draw well, they may choose to have that first match end in a clean finish and present a different main event the following week.

Below are examples of how some of the bigger feuds played out in select cities.

Bill Dromo vs Buddy Colt in Columbus

- 3/3 Columbus title: Dromo won two falls to none, though the second fall was by disqualification when Colt's manager Homer O'Dell "deliberately interfered".
- 3/24 Columbus title: Colt won the first fall with a neck breaker and Dromo won the second fall with an atomic drop. In the third fall, Colt "used karate on Dromo" and was disqualified. Local promoter Fred Ward then "held up" the title, believing Colt "deliberately got himself disqualified to save his title".
- 3/31 Columbus title, disqualification rule waived: After splitting the first two falls, both wrestlers were disqualified in the third fall.
- 4/7 Columbus title, disqualification rule waived, must be a winner: Colt defeated Dromo.

El Mongol vs Big John in Columbus

- 9/1 One fall to a finish, no time limit: Mongol won; this match had been set up the previous week when both men were disqualified during an elimination-style eight-man tag team match.
- 9/8 Texas death match with ring enclosed in wire fence: Mongol won.

Dick Steinborn & George Scott vs The Assassins in Atlanta

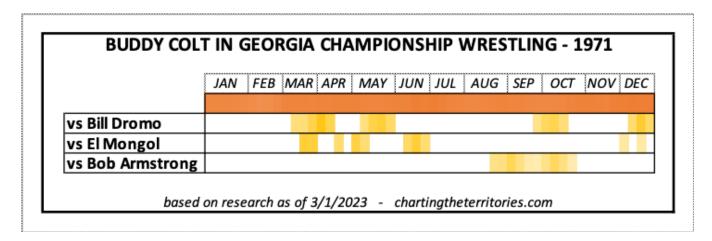

- 9/17 Steinborn & Scott won.
- 10/1 Georgia Tag Team titles: According to the Atlanta Journal-Constitution, Scott & Steinborn won this match. According to Georgia Wrestling History (GWH), the Assassins won the match. If Scott & Steinborn had won, it was likely by a disqualification of some sort. Steinborn was taken from the ring on a stretcher, and GWH reported that promoter Paul Jones "held up" the titles pending a rematch.
- 10/8 No disqualification, two referees: The match went to a draw. This bout was for the "held up" titles; additionally there was a stipulation that unless Scott & Steinborn won the match, the Assassins would "continue to reign" as champions. Since the match ended in a draw, the Assassins had the titles "returned to them".
- 11/5 The Assassins won.

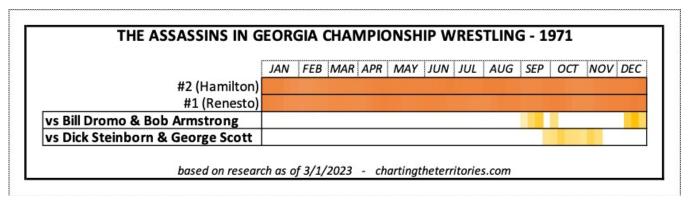

Roberto Soto vs Billy Spears in Waycross

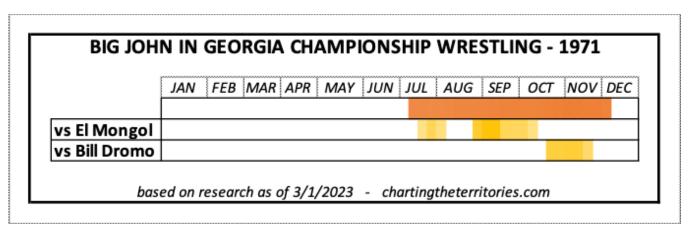

- 8/9 Both men were disqualified in the third fall after 32 minutes.
- 8/16 10 rounds boxing: Results not available.
- 9/13 Lights out match: Spears won in 37 minutes.

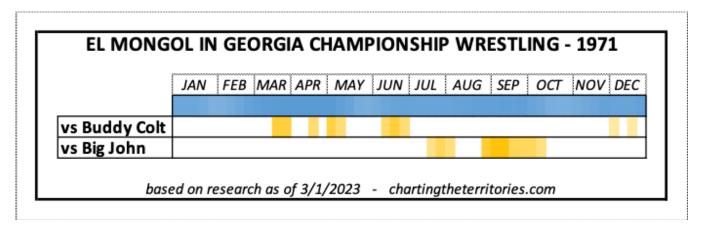

Feuds by Wrestler

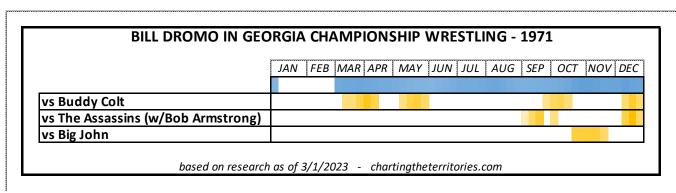

By listing feuds of the top wrestlers in chronological order, you can get a better feel for their "arc" during the year.

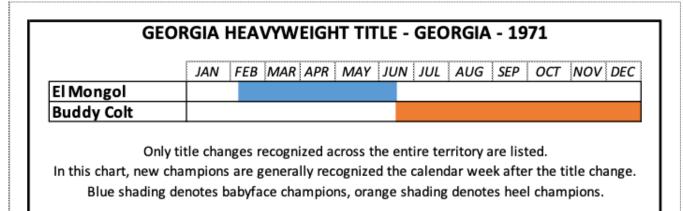

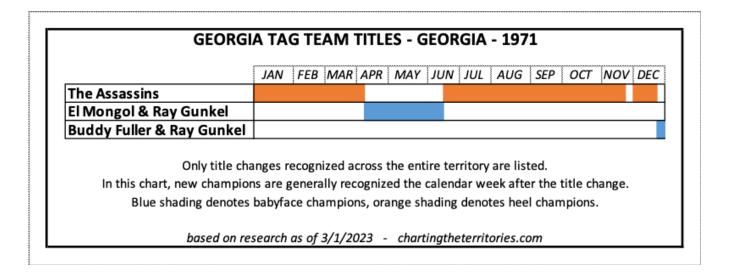

Title Holders and Histories

The following charts show the chronological progression of title holders in the territory. Looking at them this way gives you a better feel for the length of title reigns, and how they may have differed between babyface champs and heel champs.

SOUTHEASTERN TAG TEAM TITLES - GEORGIA - 1971 JAN | FEB | MAR | APR | MAY | JUN | JUL | AUG | SEP | OCT | NOV | DEC Bob Armstrong & El Mongol | The Assassins Bill Dromo & Bob Armstrong

These titles were primily acknowledged in Fred Ward's towns (Columbus, Macon, Albany)

Only title changes recognized across the entire territory are listed.

In this chart, new champions are generally recognized the calendar week after the title change.

Blue shading denotes babyface champions, orange shading denotes heel champions.

Charting the World Champ

In 1971, NWA World Heavyweight champion Dory Funk Jr. made two trips to the territory. All matches were title bouts unless otherwise noted.

January 20th through January 23rd

- 1/20 Columbus: Dory vs Assassin #2. Funk won the second and third falls to win the match. Assassin won the first fall with a back breaker, then Dory won the second fall with "his famous spinning toe hold" and the third "with a cradle hold in a hectic finish".
- 1/22 Atlanta: Dory vs Paul DeMarco. Funk won the match; during the match, DeMarco reportedly "created a gash" over Dory's right eye that required ten stitches.
- 1/23 Griffin: Dory vs Kubla Khan. Results not available.

August 17th through August 20th

- 8/17 Macon: Dory vs Bob Armstrong. The match ended in a draw.
- 8/18 Columbus: Dory & El Mongol vs Buddy Colt & Big John. Dory & Mongol won, with Mongol beating John in the first fall and Funk beating Colt in the second fall.
- 8/20 Atlanta: Dory vs Buddy Colt. Funk won by disqualification after Homer O'Dell interfered.

Taking Attendance

In this section, we look at any attendance (and/or gate) figures we have. Unless otherwise noted, these numbers come from newspaper reports. They should be taken with several grains of salt.

Unfortunately we only have one concrete attendance figure from this territory for the year. On April 14th in Columbus, they drew "over 3,000" for a card that featured a battle royal.

House Show Lineups and Results

We have shared our newspaper clippings for over 360 house shows in the territory during the year with wrestlingdata.com to aid them in providing comprehensive information. In addition, they have results from 100 television tapings (weekly live TV in Columbus and in Atlanta).
