
CPMA statement regarding trade action announced by the Trump Administration and Canada's response

CPMA is closely monitoring developments related to trade action announced by U.S. President Donald Trump and Canada's response to the U.S. actions.

As of April 2, President Trump has announced that USMCA-compliant goods originating from Canada and Mexico will remain tariff-free. Goods originating from Canada and Mexico, including fresh produce, which are not USMCA-compliant remain subject to a 25% tariff.

While Canadian fresh produce is not directly implicated in the measures announced yesterday, CPMA remains actively engaged with the Government of Canada regarding any potential future impacts for the fresh produce industry, and we will continue to work with our colleagues in Canada, the U.S. and Mexico to ensure a common understanding of impacts across North America.
