Need some fresh air?

Prince William Forest Park

The largest protected natural area in the DC Metro Area. 15,000 acres of protected woodlands with hiking, biking, and camping.

Occoquan Bay

Where the Occoquan River empties into the Potomac River, this bay is a world famous wildlife refuge known for dozens of species of migratory birds.

Bull Run Mountains

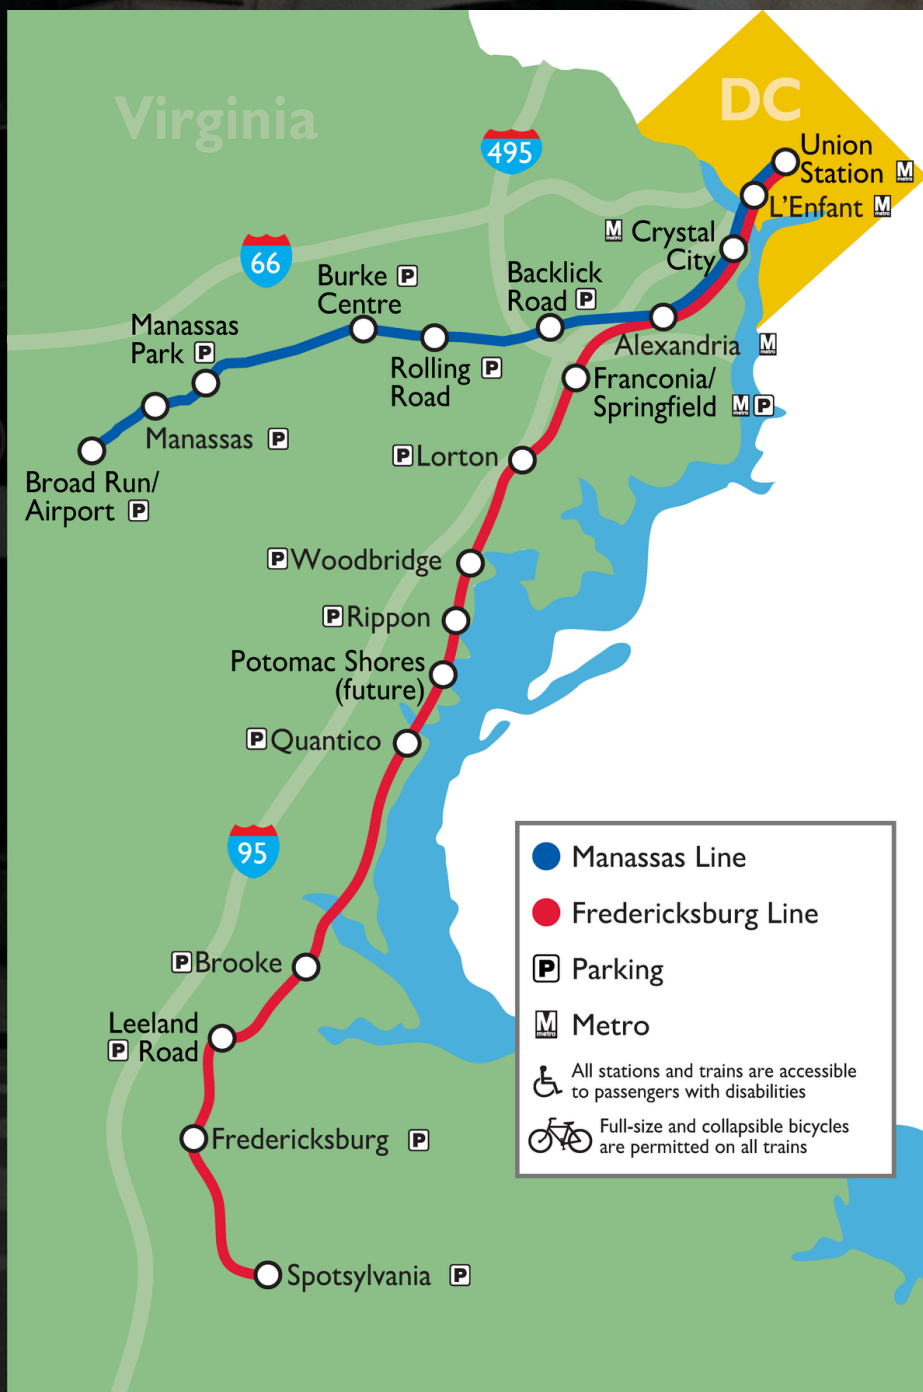

Straddling Prince William and Fauquier Counties, approximately 2500 acres of protected forestland with hiking, biking, and camping.

Let's talk commuting

Slugging (noun): An informal, free carpooling system. Drivers pick up commuters they may or may not know at established pickup spots called "slug lines," usually commuter lots, so the car has at least three people and can use the I-95, I-395 express lanes, and I-66 toll-free.

Tolls on the I-95/395/495 Express Lanes are set to guarantee a minimum average speed of 55mph. Depending on traffic, tolls can exceed $50 during rush hour for non-HOV vehicles.

Driving isn't the only option.

If you'd rather not drive, the Virginia Railway Express (VRE) might be for you. VRE is a commuter rail, meaning it runs into the city in the morning (north/east) and out of the city (south/west) in the afternoon. Monthly passes are available.
