

Horns Up: 10 Dynamic Exercises for Trumpet was conceived to provide the modern trumpet player with fresh dynamic exercises to develop instrumental technique, as well as a better comprehension and analysis of the intervals, blues scale, melodic minor and major scales, harmonic major, major triads, diminished and whole tone scales. It is a didactic workbook inspired on the talent and music career of my younger brother Damian Salvent, who is the principal trumpeter of the Opera and Ballet Symphony Orchestra of Cuba, as well as the principal assistant at the National Symphony Orchestra. The book was originally designed for trumpet players, but can be also used effectively on most instruments.

Be aware that there are other different ways to approach music theory and altissimo register technique, and these exercises are by no means the only way to do so. I am presenting this method because I believe it is practical, original, modern and fun to play. Also, it produces outstanding results.

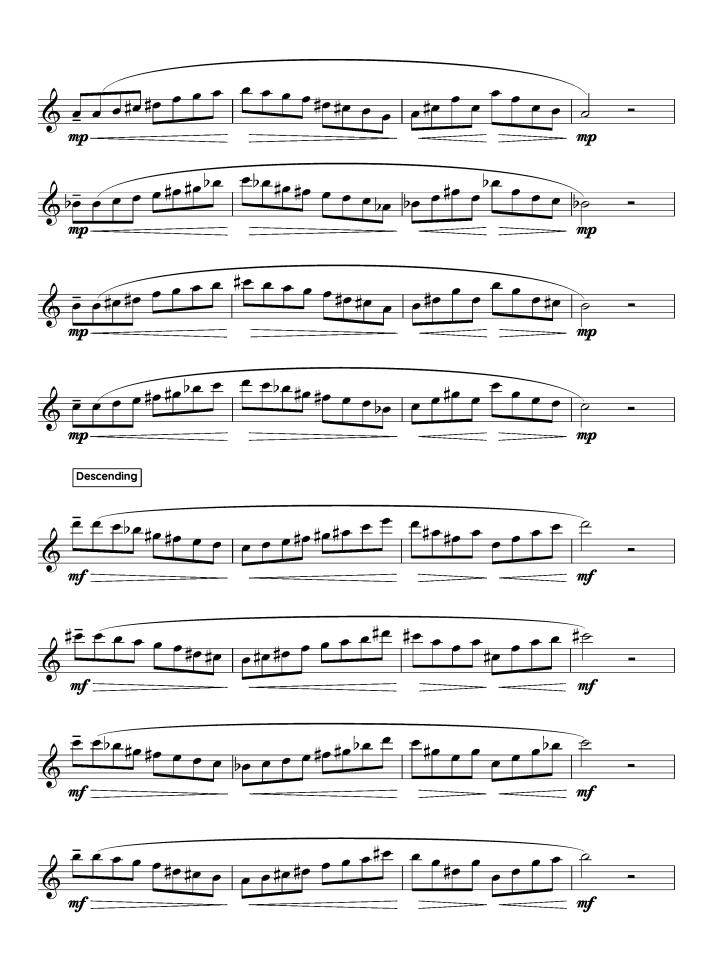

Start practicing at the tempo you feel comfortable with. Every exercises has a suggested tempo as an initial guide. Once the exercise is executed with confidence and without mistakes, feel free to increase the speed at your will. My recommendation is to include at least one exercise per week. By doing so, musicians are going to work actively on sound, intonation, tempo, embouchure, endurance, music theory. All by using a wide combination of patterns that involve triads, intervals, chromatic exercises, as well as symmetric and asymmetric scales. The use of the metronome and a tuner is strongly recommended to achieve greater outcome.

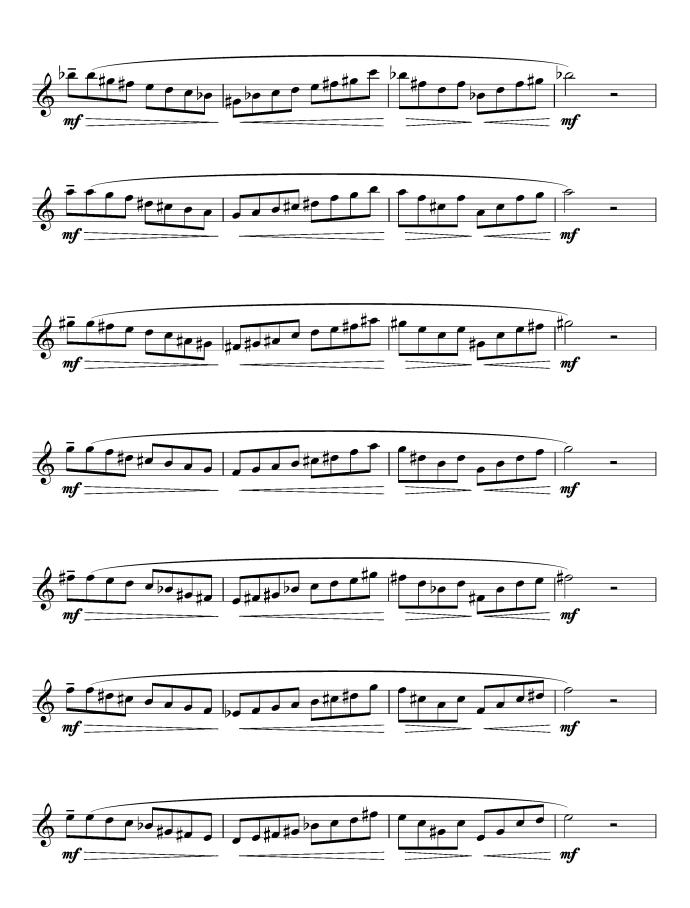

Thanks to trumpeter Osvaldo Fleites, touring and recording artist, for the feedbacks, as well as my brother Damian Salvent for the revisions in the writing process of the book.

Have fun!

Exercise #10 - "Whole Tone"
