

Travel with The Current

Iceland Airwaves Festival

November 2-7, 2021

“The hippest long weekend on the annual music-festival calendar.”

– Rolling Stone

See a different side of Iceland with a truly insider experience at one of the world’s best music festivals – Iceland Airwaves. Discover new artists at the center of the Reykjavík music scene, including innovative artists like Aragrúi, Countess Malaise, Holdgervla and MAMMÚT. Plus, spend six days with fellow music lovers taking in everything Reykjavík has to offer, from museum tours to record shopping to outdoor adventures.

After missing out last year, The Current is finally heading back to the Iceland Airwaves Festival this November, and I’m super excited about it because I get to travel with YOU, music heads like me!!

This is the first time ever we’re inviting The Current’s listeners to join us in person at Iceland Airwaves, and I’d love it if you came with me. You’ll get a truly insider experience at one of the world’s coolest music festivals, and we’ll have 6 whole days to take in Reykjavík. We have so much to discover together: The food. The beer. The waterfalls. The music.

This is a trip of a lifetime, and you’ll be enjoying it with people who love music as much as you do. I really hope you’ll join me! Space is limited, and it’s likely to sell out, so don’t wait too long. I can’t wait!

Jade: Host and Music Director, The Current, MPR

Jade is the Music Director and on-air host for The Current weekdays from 10am-2pm. The Minnesota native found an early love of music through dance, but quickly fell in love with lyrics, stories, and the sense of place that music can create. While studying journalism at the University of Kansas, she kept her Minnesota ties close as an intern for 2024 Records, while booking bands like Spoon and Sharon Jones to play at her university. Starting at The Current as an overnight host in 2008, Jade continued her work to promote Minnesota artists by curating musical events around the cities, most notably the Summit Backyard Bash and Wing Young Huie's University Avenue Project (where she dug into the Frogtown music scene and created a soundtrack to the art show and live event series). She organized and booked The Current's Road Trip, a Legacy-funded project that showcased Minnesota artists around the state. That led her to work as the principal at Minnesota Music Coalition, taking it from an idea to a stable and functioning non-profit. In 2014, she started an event planning company, which won a Knight Foundation Arts Challenge. Now, she is busy researching the musical landscape and discovering new music that the listeners of The Current should know.
