Amalies new single 'Alien'

Is a reflection on the feeling of being the odd one out

"I went through a time when no matter where I was I always felt like I was the odd one out it was all in my head but I still felt it and really I think that thats something everyone feels at some point but we don't realise it at the time and in the end it helps you become yourself"

"I wrote alien overseas with some really incredible artists and it's funny because I was writing about the feeling of never fitting in but in that studio I don't think I've ever felt more like I belonged"

From sharing the stage last year with some of the biggest names in Aussie music including Kate Ceberano and Boom Crash Opera at the 2024 Brighter Days Festival, to the release of her previous single 'So Please' "captivating both seasoned musicians and new listeners alike" -conversations About Her, Produced with (platinum award winning producer) Garrett Kato. Amalie is one to watch.

Alien hits hard with open, honest lyrics, haunting piano and a driving bass you can't help but dance to.
