Project 1- Renaissance Painting

For this project I turned a classic renaissance painting into a modern magazine cover. The famous painting is known as the Girl with the Pearl Earring by Johannes Vermeer. The iconic painting lacked color and looked dulled. I decided to brighten the colors and make it modern. I placed the paintings face on a current day model to make it more 20th century. This magazine cover is posing as a mockup advertisement for Vogue.

Project 2- Illustrator

For this project we tested the steadiness of our hands. We were given a beautiful landscape to hand draw in illustrator. This was my first time using illustrator to replicate an image. It was challenging to work with such tedious linework, but tested our patience. Keeping track of the different patterns of lines was difficult, but it was fun adding my own creative touch of the different hues and shades of the same color. I am grateful I got to do this project because it tested the perfectionism I always strive for.

Project 3- Movie Poster

The movie poster I chose to recreate was by Stephen King called "IT" which is one of my favorite movies. The more I played around with this project the more ideas kept coming to my head. The original poster did not do this movie justice, I felt like there needed to be more. My ideas started from me wanting to portray the good versus the bad in the film. I believe the original poster was very dark and did not show enough. I wanted to add color and give the movie more character. I believe the one I created brings out more emotions and wondering eyes to an audience than the original.

Project 4- Magazine

For this project we were challenged to create a magazine on any topic of your choosing. I was inspired by one of my favorite beauty magazine, Allure. I love doing makeup and skincare so I knew my creativity would be tested with this project. Eyebrows are my favorite part about makeup so I decided it would be easier to do a whole magazine on eyebrows. I added numerous articles about different aspects of eyebrows. My passion on the topic and creativity allowed me to present work that looks professionally done.
