“AN EVENING OF POWERFUL READINGS”

About Wizard's Wardrobe

In September 2011 over twenty members and friends of First Presbyterian Church started tutoring at Giffen Elementary School.

In June 2014 a subset of that group, realizing that the children of Giffen needed more help, started planning the next step. Inspired by the TED talk "Once Upon A School", we set out to establish a one-on-one after-school tutoring program primarily for 1st through 3rd grade students, continuing on with them through elementary school. We incorporated one year later as South End Neighborhood Tutors and located space for the program one block east of Giffen. In February 2017, the Wizard's Wardrobe became a reality and opened its doors to seven students. Since then we have served twenty-three students with forty trained tutors.

Meeting a Need

- We believe that all children deserve the opportunity to succeed.
- Only thirteen percent of the students in third – sixth grade at Giffen Elementary School read at grade level. In grades one to three students learn to read; in grades four and above students read to learn. Once students reach fourth grade, those who cannot read are at an overwhelming disadvantage.
- Research shows that students who get thirty-five to forty hours of individual tutoring can gain one year in academic growth.
- With three hours a week of one-to-one tutoring, we aim to achieve marked improvement in our students' reading skills, positioning them for academic success.

Rex has been with the Times Union, the dominant communication medium in New York's Capital Region, for a quarter-century, including eighteen years as the newspaper's editor – a time when it won national recognition for writing, reporting, photography and design, both in print and digitally. He is a former national correspondent and bureau chief for Newsday, and previously edited community newspapers in New York and Indiana. Earlier in his career, he was a congressional aide in Washington for four years and a television reporter and anchor in the metropolitan New York region. He has received numerous professional citations and awards, including the Distinguished Service Award of the national Society of Professional Journalists, a Pulitzer Fellowship and a Rotary Fellowship. He is a graduate cum laude of Trinity University in San Antonio, Texas, and received a master's degree with highest honors from the Columbia University Graduate School of Journalism, where he chairs the Alumni Board. MARIAN EATON is a fully credentialed American Sign Language (ASL) interpreter with forty-seven years of interpreting experience. For the past thirty-two years she has been in private practice under the dba: Associates in Interpreting and Mentoring Services. While providing services in a variety of arenas, she specializes in Legal, Medical, Mental Health, and Performance interpretation. Since 2003 she has been a regular interpreter for Proctors Theater's Broadway Series and prior to that for the former New York State Theater Institute (NYSTI), as well as periodically for Cap Rep. Marian views her work as an ASL interpreter as acts of social justice. She believes Deaf and Hard of Hearing people have the right to receive equal access with hearing people to all communication. This is a right that has been denied Deaf and Hard of Hearing people for centuries. Many hearing people are unaware that a unique and vibrant Deaf Culture exists. ASL, the language of that Culture, is to be respected as the means of everyday communication amongst its members and as the linguistic modality Deaf artists use to create visual poetry and prose. These creations are every bit as expressive and enjoyable to those who understand ASL as reading or listening to prose and poetry is to those who understand English! As you watch the interpretation of these original pieces read by their authors, you may be able to observe differences in the length between the original and interpreted presentations or that temporal aspects of a piece occur in different sequences. This is a function not only of the differences between two languages, but most especially because of the differences between a spoken/auditory language and a visual/gestural language that makes use of motion and three-dimensional space. Marian is thrilled and honored to participate in this exciting event supporting the work of Wizard's Wardrobe and hopes her work will begin to "draw back the curtain" on a form of artistic expression little known by most hearing people.

MIKI CONN is an artist, storyteller, poet, author and community organizer. Her African and Native American roots inspired her interest in indigenous arts and multiculturalism. Miki is the former executive director of the Hamilton Hill Arts Center, a multi-arts center located in the heart of the inner-city in Schenectady. Although retired, she teaches art and tells stories to children and adults and offers workshops and classes in team building, creativity, writing and African spirituality. Her essays are published in the anthology Sacred Waters, she edited and self-published Integrating Delmar 1957, the Story of a Friendship, authored by her mother, Margaret Cunningham and family friend, Arlen Clinard. Her book, Out of My Mind, A Quirky Look at Life Through Poetry was published in November 2019 and she recently finished a children's book, The Story of a House. She will read two poems and a section of The Story of a House.

LORRAINE GARNETT was born and raised in Jamaica, West Indies. She attended Rockland Community College in Suffern, N.Y. She read from this and other works at the PEN World Voice Festivals, Berl's Poetry Shop, The Workers United Film Festival and The People's Forum. Lorraine did her first interview with Journalist, Maddie Crum of The Buffler for a piece titled, "Meditations in an Emergency". The article was a part of the Worker Writers School Coronavirus Haiku project. Lorraine was also one of five poets from the Workers Writers School featured in ATM Magazine. She lives in Brooklyn, New York with her college scholars, Laurence and Paris, and currently has shifted her focus to writing haikus and fairy tales for children. Lorraine feels a strong sense of duty to include children in her writings. Her experience with and passion for children makes this new project fun and rewarding.
