

Why give to the church

In the context of Christian faith, the act of giving back to God and the church holds deep theological and practical significance. Let's explore the reasons behind this practice:

1. We Belong to God:

- According to Scripture, Christians are the Lord's special possession. Our bodies are temples of the Holy Spirit, and we are not our own; we were bought at a price (1 Corinthians 6:19-20).
- Recognizing that we belong to God means we must also forfeit ownership and control of our possessions. Everything we have is a gift from our Creator, and ultimately, God owns everything (1 Corinthians 4:7; Psalm 24:1).
- As faithful stewards, we give in accordance with His will, acknowledging that He alone determines how resources should be distributed and used.

2. We Have Received Much:

- In Christ, we realize three inescapable truths:
 - We belong to God.
 - We have received abundantly.
 - Money matters.
- Gratitude for what we've received motivates us to give back. Our giving becomes a tangible expression of God's blessings in our lives.

3. Money Matters:

- Money is a practical aspect of our lives. It impacts our choices, priorities, and well-being.
- When we give, we acknowledge that God's purposes extend beyond our individual needs. His wealth is meant to bless others, and our role is to participate in that purpose (1 John 4:8, 11).

4. Love and Generosity:

- John 3:16 reveals the heart of God: "For God so loved the world that He gave..." Love gives, and as believers, we are called to love one another.
- Our giving reflects God's love and generosity. It's an opportunity to put Him first in our lives (Deuteronomy 14:23).

In summary, giving back to God and the church is not merely a financial transaction; it's a response to God's love, an acknowledgment of His ownership, and a way to bless others. Through our gifts, we make God's love tangible in our world
