

PLAINVIEW KNIGHTS

Levon Carter, Owner, CEO

Good day,

As you see above, I'm Levon Carter, 30 years old, and I'm from my hometown of Plainview, Texas. I grew up and graduated from Plainview High School in 2010. I attended South Plains College. I've always played in leagues and just about every tournament that was about basketball.

I've always had a vision of establishing a basketball venue or program in Plainview, Texas, that could bring the community together, so that together we can help those that want to expand on their skills in basketball as they learn ethics and core values that they may apply to everyday life.

Being a basketball player is all I've known since childhood. Basketball represents my blood, sweat, tears, passion, sacrifice, pain, loss; and most of all, a sense of belonging to a like minded family. Plainview Knights Basketball Association will be home to this family. At this moment in my life, these are the things that have my devotion: my creator, my family, my work, which is also my basketball. The game I love so much has helped shape my life probably more than anything else. It has instilled in me a vicious will to achieve and embrace my ambitions instead of fearing them. Basketball gave me an open opportunity to try something new, and to establish a professional basketball team in West Texas, to help bring revenue into our neighboring communities, and to help those hidden athletes at another chance on another level to facilitate their basketball dreams.

Sincerely,

Levon Carter
