- Harry Hayes Produce Market on Main Street. The garden was behind the house along French Run. In later years, through marriage, it became the Hayes-McClay market, and the produce was grown on the McClay farm in Groveport
- Seymore and Vivian Hickman Farm on 256 at the intersection of Graham and Livingston. All the buildings were painted a cream-yellow
- The man in a pickup truck who sold sweet corn in front of the Pour House. He sold out quickly
- Burger Boy Food-o-Rama (BBF), with the “whirling satellite.” As far as I know, it was the first fast-food in town. The satellite was such a distraction, it had to be stopped due to a large number of traffic accidents
- When BBF had a baby elephant in the parking lot as a promotion with the Columbus Zoo
- The traffic light at Main and Jackson was the only one in town

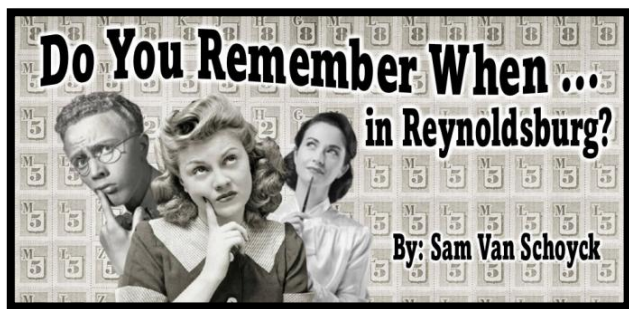

- The name of BBF’s clown mascot – Mr. Happy
- Daily sonic booms caused by aircraft from Lockbourne (Rickenbacker) AFB. They would reach the speed of sound about the time they got to town

- Bomb Drills at school. At French Run, students were marched to the kitchen where they would kneel with heads tucked and against the wall
- I-70 was constructed. It was completed east to James Road, and west to Kirkersville first. The piece south of town was the last to be done
- The annual Minstrel Show
  - When I-270 was built, and wiped out the lost town of Hibernia on Main Street
  - Twin Auto Towing was in the old wooden school house at Hibernia. It was owned by the Hannah twins who lived in Reynoldsburg. Their motto was - “Don’t Cuss, Call Us”
- The covered bridge on Tussing Road over Blacklick Creek
- Wetherall Dairy milk served at school – white 1¢, chocolate 2¢
- W.A. Gurtler had a railroad contracting and house moving business in a house on Bryden Road. Employees included Ralph (Bogey) Nessley, Suzanne Van Schoyck and Marylou Van Schoyck. They also had an office in Chicago.

- The large concrete fountain with the colorful changing lights on the pond at Glen Rest Cemetery
- Gary and Maude 'Wiswell's Market' a Red and White grocery
- The various filling stations – from east to west on Main –
  - Pure Oil owned by Bernard and Don Griffith
  - Sinclair with Dino the Dinosaur
  - Gulf at Waggoner Road owned by Owen Sheets and later Bill Van Hoose
  - Marathon at Lancaster and Main owned by Mickey Slack
  - Sohio on the opposite corner owned by the Wogan family
  - Shell at the shopping center owned by Buck and Chuck
- When you took your rags to Mary Durant and she would weave rag rugs for you
- The old barn at Waggoner Road and Main with the Mail Pouch logo painted on it.
- The Village Store and Shorty List's shoe repair shop located on the lower level
- Don Foltz Jewelry
- Fred and Freda Feucht's East End Market
- Fred Feucht's strawberries grown right next to the store.
- The Little Weekly newspaper. Features included Gail Wollam's

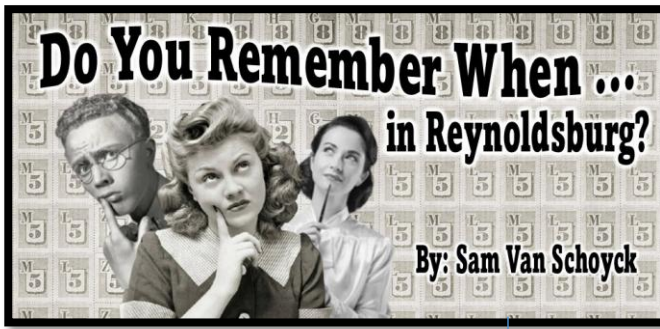

Society Column, Teen Talk and the daily school menus so you could decide if you wanted to buy or pack your lunch

- The large Victorian house at the corner of Brice and Main built by Whitney and Louisa Tussing

- Carl Whitmer's barber shop next to Vick's Pizza
- Sen-Rey beauty salon in the three-story house just west of Vick's. It was owned by Senath Shadwick
- Lawson Dairy's store
- When the second house south of

Main on Graham Road exploded due to a natural gas leak – circa 1964

- Popular pro wrestler Frankie Talaber lived on Graham Road
- George “Pike” Taylor getting around town on his three-wheel bicycle
- Oath Young, the school crossing guard, stationed at Jackson and Main every day
- The brass cannons at the entrance to Silent Home cemetery. They were later stolen and never recovered
- When lightning struck the steeple of the old Methodist Church on Main in 1972
- Twin Kiss ice cream owned by Mike and Birdie Zorich
- J-Mart surplus store, later the location of the Truro Fire Department. They had a resident talking Minah bird
- When the fire department was all volunteer. The siren would blow to call the firemen to the station: one long ring was a fire; three short rings was for the squad

- When the town had only two police officers – Charlie Fine and Officer Schultz
- When an officer accidentally discharged a shotgun that was standing upright on the floor hump, blowing the top off the cruiser. Afterwards, shotguns were required to be locked in the trunk of the cruiser

- Stapleton’s Auto Parts owned by Ezra “Ez” Stapleton, and later, his son, Bob
- The A & P grocery. The building later became the post office
- The skating rink, swimming pool and bowling alley, all owned by Sam Moore
- The tall, ancient pine trees in front of Pick Richards house. They appear in the earliest photos of town
- Zettler Hardware in the shopping center. When they moved to town, they vowed to put Ralph Connell out of business. They did not
- The drug stores – Hayes, Sainato, Rexall, and Reynoldsburg Pharmacy
- Ron’s Pizza, a wholesaler who made individual pizzas for venues such as the Columbus Jets baseball team
- Al Haft’s motel and restaurant, and the farm windmill that towered above

- Stoney Creek Country Club on 256
- The Wetherell Dairy store managed by Bill Wiswell and his sister Wilma Wiswell Turner cashiered
- We listened to WCOL on our transistor radios
- When our telephone exchange was Union (UN), or UN6-xxxx. The UN was an abbreviation of Union. Other exchanges in the area were Belmont (BE) in Whitehall and Capitol (CA) for downtown Columbus. Hudson (HU) in Upper Arlington, and Clermont (CL) in the Clintonville area. Others were TE for Pickerington and TU in Westerville.
- The annual Ox Roast
- The menagerie at Blacklick Woods
- Buck Bennett driving through town in his very old tow truck and his slouch hat
- Snook Airfield on Taylor Road owned by Buster Snook.
- A quasi-industrial park on Taylor Road that included Reynoldsburg Trucking (owned by Art Slonaker), Industrial Steam (coal haulers), and Arrow-Universal Concrete
- Cheatwood Funeral Home
- Bordon Milk and Omar Bread offered home delivery
- Ralph Connell telling you “I don’t have one, but I can get it on Wednesday when I go to town.”

- Bars included: Pandora’s Box, The Pour House, and The Rose Hill Tavern
- The old post office was on

French Drive by Dr. Weltner’s office

- Chuck Alspaugh had the preeminent excavating business in the area
- The East End carryout with the very profane parrot
- Nightengale Cottage, the tuberculosis sanitarium on Brice Road where I-70 crosses. Part of the land became Chi Chi’s, Bob Evans, and an office park. After TB was relegated to the past, the facility was a hospital for children given up to the state by their parents. Many suffered from physical and mental issues and were not expected to survive past toddler age. Merna Wiswell (Bill’s wife) was a nurse at the hospital for much of her career
- Jean’s Coffee Shop

GROWING UP IN THE BURG

BY: MARY

Growing Up In The Burg

By: Mary Evans Eaton
1964 RHS Graduate

I was blessed to be born on one of the days that the RHS football field was being finished.

My Dad was laying sod all afternoon while my pregnant mother was down Broad Alley in our white house behind the Methodist Church on Main Street. She knew it was time to get to Saint Ann's Hospital since I would be her third child.

She opened the car door and blew the horn. She repeatedly beeped until my father came running. He jumped in the car, and we were off to Columbus.

My brother and sister were safely staying with a neighbor, so I had all their attention on my arrival.

Fortunately for all three of us, things went well and I arrived early on the Saturday morning.

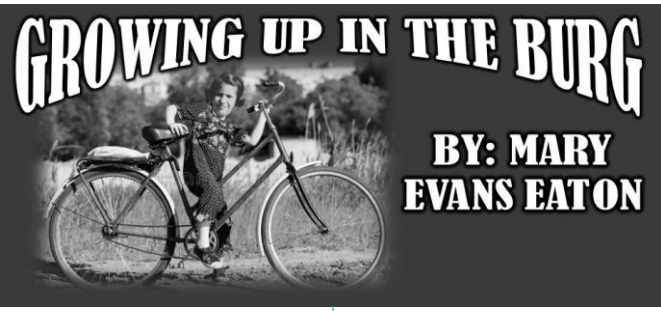

I have learned that having an older sister and brother meant that I would fall into the "Line of Importance" in last place. Later in life I was told by my siblings that my parents loved me best. I knew better. I didn't repeat their mistakes so I learned from them.

We lived in that house on 301 Main Street until I was in Mrs. Bradow's third grade class. I recall one of the scariest days living there. (continued on page 10)

GROWING UP IN THE BURG

EVANS EATON

page 09)

The alley behind our house went all the way to what is now Graham Road. The alley was narrow allowing only one car to pass easily.

I wanted to ride my sister's bike down the alley but I was too small to reach the seat. That didn't stop me from trying. Being about six, I hadn't thought about my blue jeans pant legs. Yep! One of those long legs got caught in the chain and there I was stranded.

I yelled for help, but I had gone past the water tower, so no one could hear me. Finally, I did what any child would, I took off my pants and pushed the bike home. All the way I was scared someone would see me "jean less" but luckily no one did. My parents bought my sister and my brother a bicycle. I never got one. Maybe because I was the "pant-less kid!"

I recall other reasons that neighborhood was special. George Curtsaw had a peacock in the backyard which would strut around sometimes. What a beautiful feathered creature that would stare at me until I hurried home and left it in peace. I fondly recall the yelling Connie Parkinson did when she wanted "Beatle Bomb" to come home for lunch. And how could I forget Georgia Orman who babysat for us occasionally. Georgia smoked cigarettes which we found fascinating. She blew smoke rings and she let us try to make them too. Oh, my mom would have been irritated had she known. Many years later when she learned from us about Georgia, she just smiled.

There were many colorful folks who lived in that area of Old Reynoldsburg too many to name BUT still in my memories of the good times in the 'Burg.'

HONORING OUR VETERANS

At Summit Road Elementary School

principal's exemplars

At 9:00 am on Veteran's Day, every student, teacher and guest filed into the gymnasium for the Veterans Day Program. Everyone stood for the Pledge of Allegiance, then one of the teachers, with the voice of an angel, sang the National Anthem, and she brought tears to my eyes. What an incredible talent! And – I was not the only one in the room sporting tears.

Rhonda asked if RTHS could loan her anything for the event, so I offered her the use of my Grandfather's WWI Army Jacket & Helmet. She also displayed a picture of him wearing the jacket.

thought process

The incredible librarian at Summit, Rhonda Eberst, put together the displays, and she will be retiring at the end of this school-year!

My Two Favorite Tomatoes

Bonnie Murdock
& Linda Young

Bonnie and Linda at the Tomato Festival entertaining the crowd and it looks like they are entertaining the Troops as well! I told Linda that I'm already shaped like that, so I will need to make myself a red top with a green collar!

There is a Goose on Top of My Printer

One of our members sent him to me. I figure it's a male goose because he just sits and stares at me waiting to see what I am going to feed him... kind of like my male dog is known to do.

Mr. Goose rides on my walker when I push it around the house, but he prefers leaving his butt-print on my printer.

Maybe he considers it like one print to another?!?

I haven't given him a name yet. If any of you have ideas for a name, send them to me!

Our Fall Elementary Tours are Over!

And just in time! It has started snowing already! We will pick up the Spring tours in April. This picture is from October 3rd when Mary filled in for Lisa Wood.
