Mazasnawin Iron Woman Rosalie Freniere was born around 1817.

Mazasnawin (also called Rosalia) father was Francòis Fernier, and her mother was Wyantoiciyewin, called Mary Helen, a Sisseton woman. Francòis and Wyantoiciyewin's children were Pejiskaya (Xavier), born around 1809, Louis, born in 1812 and died in 1839, Norris, who was born in 1816, and Rosalie (Mazasnawin or Iron Woman), who was born after 1817. Francòis was a long time trader. He had lived and had a store near Lac Traverse, and was visited by Father Ravoux in the fall of 1842.

Mazasnawin's grandfather was Cekpa, also known as Narcisse Freniere. Cekpa married to Winona Crawford, who was born in 1808. He then married an Elm River Yanktonai woman. And finally, Cekpa married another Yantonai woman. Cekpa's children include Susan Freniere (who married Joseph R. Brown at Lac Traverse in 1835), Sataka, also known as Daniel Antoine, Antoine, a daughter who married Francòis Chardon, Thomas, Narcisse

Rosalie and Kahoton lived close to the Pond cabin in what was later part of east Shakopee. They lived in the house of Hazen Mooers and Mañpiya-hota Win. Rosalie and Kahoton lived here from 1846 until the spring of 1853. They probably lived in a bark lodge near what is now the duck pond in Memorial Park.

(who was born around 1841 in Minnesota Territory), and Francòis, who was Mazasnawin's father.

In 1816, Cekpa was at Prairie du Chien, and was employed by James Aird. In 1819 he was employed by Graham & Renville as an interpreter at Lac Traverse. From 1824 to 1827, Cekpa worked for the American Fur Company, but by 1836 Cekpa and his brothers, Francòis and Louis, were independent traders in a part of the American Fur Company Western outfit. They were trading at the mouth of the Cheyenne River. Cekpa, also known as Narcisse, died while on a journey to the Missouri River.

Mazasnawin's great grandfather was Charles-Jacques Fernier (Lafreniere) and a Sisseton woman whose father was Tokokotipexni, or He Who Fears Nothing. Charles-Jacques was a trader on the Rivière Saint-Pierre in the 1780s. So Mazasnawin kin were an important part of her life.

Mazasnawin met and married Kahoton 'Makes Noise by Striking' John Mooers on June 30, 1845.

Mazasnawin 'Iron Woman' Rosalie Ferniere Mooers and Kahoton 'Makes Noise by Striking' John Mooers lived with his parents in a house not far from the Samuel and Cordelia Eggleston Pond cabin in Tinta Otunwe (later Shakopee) starting in 1846. The cabin was north of the mission house, between there and the Rivière Saint-Pierre. When Hazen Mooers and Mañpiya-hota Win moved out in the spring of 1849, Rosalie and Kahoton continued to live in Tinta Otunwe, and was an Indian farmer for the government until the spring of 1853.

Rosalie and Kahoton had four children: Moses, twins Mary Ann and Jane Ann, and James.
