

Marva Walker, originally from Tallahassee, Florida, relocated to Maryland in 2018. She currently works in the healthcare industry but is deeply passionate about youth development.

In Tallahassee, Marva served as a Mentor Coordinator for the Take Stock in Children program at Tallahassee Community College.

There, she played a pivotal role in assisting students from grades 6-12 with college preparation, guiding them through the application process, and identifying scholarship opportunities.

Marva is a proud parent of two married children and a doting grandmother to seven grandchildren, including four teenagers, two preteens, and a newborn.

She has a special affinity for working with teens, believing that with the right support, guidance, and care, the younger generation can achieve remarkable success.

In her leisure time, Marva enjoys reading, listening to music, traveling, watching sports, participating in church activities, and bowling.
