Editorial

Like the selection of all representative teams from the beginning of time, the choice of the eleven to do battle for Australia in today's first test has brought forth the usual volume of criticism. Such criticism is the essence of democracy because it tends to keep selectors "on their toes."

The boys who represented N.S.W. in last week's match, are the unfortunates, because in some measure they are really the "trial horses." Failure in the opening match often prejudices test match selection. Yet if a team fails—as N.S.W. did last week—and Australian selectors made no effort to improve it for the first test, they would be branded incompetentsand rightly so.

The selectors went into every angle of a very difficult problem—finding an eleven with the necessary balance and efficiency to best our very clever Yugoslavian visitors. No easy task you will admit. Unfortunately, when some enthusiast condemns the selection of a particular player-he is unable to answer the simple question—"Well who is better in that position." Selecting a team is not just a matter of finding who is the best inside right or left half, etc. Rather is it a question of finding an inside right who will blend with chosen colleagues and outplay opposing defenders-or, a left half who can subdue a troublesome right wing at the same time purveying his own left wing with scoring opportunities. But in all instances, first and foremost-a chosen player must blend with the remainder of the side or the most necessary tribute (balance) will be lost. The best player in any particular position in club football, is not necessarily the man required in international games.

So from that simple explanation you will realise that selection of an Australian team, has many more complications than just choosing the best player in any position in club games.

For that reason, I think the Australian selectors have made a great start on a heavy task. They may not succeed in the earliest stages, but contrary to a general belief amongst soccer fans. I do believe that they will eventually produce an Australian test team which will defeat our clever soccer visitors.

Interesting Facts About Our Visitors

Quite a number of N.S.W. clubs were interested in trying to induce some of the Yugoslav players to remain in Australia. Inclusion of any of them in our teams would most certainly raise the standard of Australian soccer. Alas for the hopes of our enterprising club officials-all of the visiting lads are too much in love with Yugoslavia to settle in Australia or any other country.

Peculiarly enough, although they do not speak English, they sing some songs in the English language with perfection. Their rendition of "She'll be Comin' Round the Mountain" and "Tipperary", is as flawless and entertaining as their amazing soccer skill on the field.

None of the boys worry about the Australian beer scarcity. In fact they are not really drinkers in that sense at all. Their only inhibitions are those of the average continental diner-a glass of good quality wine instead of tea or coffee during dinner.

In the tour's opening match last week, spectators were amazed by the voluble and demonstrative remonstrations amongst the Yugoslav players during play. The explanation is simple. Each time an attacking move broke down, the offender was told exactly how far

The youthful goalkeeper Vladimir Beara is as modest as he is clever. Presented with an action photograph showing him leaping high over Frank Parsons head to clutch the ball, he pointed to Parsons, and ignoring his own magnificcent effort, said through the interpretor "he is a very good player."

I know they regarded one or two of our players as well -not so good, but when you asked their opinions of those players, the Yugoslavians smiled benignly and said they were good.

Slavko Lustica

Vladimir Beara

Australia was the first soccer country to think of numbering its players, the numerals on the shirt of course ranging from 1 to 10, with the goalkeeper un-numbered because his isolated position made him easily distinguishable. John Lewis, manager of the English professional side which toured Australia in 1925, liked the idea, and introduced it upon his return to England. -But with one difference. The goalkeepers bore number 1 and the range was extended to number 11. This system has been adopted in all other countries now. (Note: It is displayed on the Yugoslavian jerseys).

POINTERS ON TO-DAY'S AUSTRALIAN TEST TEAM

*The Goalkeeper: Jim Jenkins, of Woonona Club, N.S.W.: Was nearly lost to soccer when he retired at the age of 25 years, last season, "Kidded" back into the game this year, he struck the best form of his career, with the result that he is now an Australian international player.

The Right Back: Josa Marston, of Leichhardt Club, N.S.W.: At 23 years of age, has already played ten times for Australia, and looks like breaking all records for appearances in test matches.

The Left Back: Cec. Drummond, of Drummoyne Club, N.S.W.: Captain of the side and like Marston has played 10 times for his country. The "never beaten" type, whose amazing speed and agility gets his team out of many tight corners.

The Right Half: Bob Lawrie, of Bundama Club, Queensland: Australia's roving player. Native of Queensland, but has played soccer in South Australia, N.S.W., Queensland and England. Probably the most artistic half back in this country.

The Centre Half: Billy Wilson, of Leichhardt Club, N.S.W .: Big, powerful and resolute half back, equally at home in defence or attack. Will make the great stopper type of centre half in third back system some day.

The Left Half: Lex Gibb, of Queensland: Veteran of the side, whose selection in test teams during last two years has led to much criticism of the selectors. Then bobs up with a classy display, to silence the critics.

*The Outside Right: George Sanders, of Granville, N.S.W.: A new international "cap". This youngster has all the ability required for test match soccer, and today will reveal whether or not he has that most essential attribute . . . Big match temperament.

The Inside Right: Alan Johns, of Adamstown Club, N.S.W .: This grand young forward toured New Zealand with the Australian team last year. D.1 not reveal his best form last Saturday, but is expected to shine in today's match.

Tile Centre-Forward: Gordon Nunn, of Queensland: One of the most interesting selections. Played in one game for Metters-Canterbury Club in Sydney this season, but is generally unknown to N.S.W. fans. Reportedly clever and a grand shot.

The Inside Left: Ron Hughes, of Metters-Canterbury Club, N.S.W .: Ron's amazing speed was nullified last week by the keen anticipation of Yugoslavian defenders—but this wily inside forward will have it all thought out differently today.

The Outside Left: Ray Marshall, of Granville Club, N.S.W.: Small, but good. There are so many likely aspirants for this position, that Ray must be on his toes to retain it. That is only a matter of him producing his best club form.

* First time selected in a test team.

Full Back: Hedley Parkes, of Wallsend Club, N.S.W .: Unlucky player. Shows great form in club games but of course has to compete for a full back position with those great pair of backs, Marston and Drummond.

Half Back: O'Neill, of Cessnock Club, N.S.W .: Australia's greatest utility player. At home in full back, half back or forward positions, Forward: Frank Parsons, of Leichhardt Club, N.S.W.: Australia's leading goal-scoring forward. Played for N.S.W. last week. His return to the Australian team may depend upon centre-forward Gordon Nunn's showing in today's game.

The Manager: Mr. J. D. Revie, of Queensland: President of the Queensland Soccer Association, and one of our most capable administrators of the code.

ROUND THE GROUNDS!

Two Yugoslavian players who came to Australia a few months ago are the stars of Victorian soccer. They are I. Drobnic and K. Ristic, of the Brighton Club, and are expected to play for the Victorian State team against their own countrymen.

The best youngster seen in N.S.W. Soccer or many years, is 17 years old Mat Pettigrew, of Wallsend's under 18 years' eleven. Remember that name, because you will see it in the Australian team in your programme some day.

Wallsend secretary, Laurie Nelson, had a quaint experience last Saturday. Outside Crystal Palace ground he found a youngster crying bitterly because he had lost his money to get into the match. Laurie handed him the usual 3d. ticket and ushered him in, whereupon the kid started howling again. When asked what was wrong this time the youngster told Laurie it was 6d. he'd lost and he had received no change with his ticket.

The Yugoslavian tourists will receive a royal welcome from countryman, Mr. K. Kuketz—lesee of the Hotel Metropole, Melbourne.

Ken Greives has gone to India with the Empire Cricket team. Here is a little secret. Ken's WIFE (yes he's married to a lovely English lass) is on her way to Australia, and Ken may join her here for a few weeks at the end of his tour, before returning to Britain.

Frank Parsons and his schoolteacher fiancee are to be married on August 6th.

Most of our soccer followers in and around Sydney seldom see a southern league match, and controversy often arises over the standard of the teams of that competition. To enter into any such controversy those involved should understand the subject fully. In today's early match listed to commence at 12.45 p.m. they will have the opportunity of witnessing a southern league 1st grade premiership match, in which two of the strongest teams will clash.

The great displays of substitute half backs. A. Henderson and R. McLelland for Granville, are going to set the club's selectors a ticklish problem when the regular men, N. Bruniges and M. Banks are fit again.

Though Swansea Belmont only obtained one point from the eleven matches in the first round of the premiership competition, the team has already won two games and thus obtained four points from its five matches played to date in the second round.

Here he is! the Australian player whom the Yugoslavian managers describe as a champion. But didn't we already know that?

A Czechoslovakian player, said to be a good one, has joined the Leichhardt Club.

The code's greatest all round sportsman is Bob Bignall. Bob has won premiership medals with the Corrimal 1st grade soccer, rugby league and cricket

J. Marston.

The Great Beara!

ODD FACTS IN SOCCER!

Soccer saved the life of an English soldier in Germany during the war. The soldier, James Blankenter, was captured and when known to be a good player was invited to have a game with a German Army side. He refused and later escaped but was recaptured and sentenced to death. The camp commandant deferred execution of the sentence, because it was hoped that Tommy would eventually consent to play.

Soccer is the greatest moral builder of all sports. During the progress of the Armies through Italy, British teams followed playing exhibition matches for the soldiers' entertainment. The code also proved greatly effective in allaying unrest amongst the Italian people. The exhibition matches which they were permitted to attend, attracted enormous crowds.

Two days behind the Armies of the D-Day invasion teams followed also, playing exhibition matches. Many hundreds of Yanks became soccer fans after watching the skill of the British star players.

One of the strangest selections in a representative side was that of centre-half J. Vernon, of Eire, in The Rest of Europe team which played Great Britain in 1946. Sweden, Denmark, Belgium, Switzerland and Norway were also represented in The Rest of Europe team. Whilst the players could not converse much because of language difficulties in the dressing room, the universal understanding of soccer on the field, enabled them to play like a machine.

A recent two day bus stoppage on the south coast upset many players' training schedules. Corrimal full back, Bob Marshall, walked 7 miles from Unanderra to Memorial Park, Corrimal, and after two hours of heavy training toddled back home again. Bob has had to stand quite a bit of twitting about that since, because, you see—he is a Scotchman!

It did not take the fans long to find easily pronounced "monikers" for our visitors. "Bozo", "Jenko", "Radio", were some overheard last week.

There are 1500 soccer leagues in the U.S.S.R. and the winners of each enters the U.S.S.R. knock out cup tournament.

As late as the early 20's it was not uncommon to see Australian players wearing skull caps. These generally were made of wool and looked like a night cap, but of course they were the same colour as the jersey worn.
