The Biocharger is an advanced energy device designed to enhance physical and mental performance by restoring the body's natural energy balance. This gentle process supports the body's native ability to rejuvenate, improve focus, and maintain energy throughout the day. A dynamic blend of light, frequency, voltage, and electromagnetic waves creates an environment that encourages resonance and cellular optimization. By stimulating the body's natural energy flow, this modality aims to support healing, boost vitality, reduce stress, and improve overall well-being.

Primary Coil The variable magnetic field is generated by the primary coil which produces a charge on the positive and negative ions surrounding the body's cell membranes.

Tesla Coil A Tesla coil produces an electromagnetic field through the spiraled electric current. Voltage modulates cellular permeability, stimulating membrane channels to deliver nutrients and cofactors to support and enhance cell signalling, detoxification, and metabolic activities.

Toroidal Coil The toroid acts like a capacitor to store the energy generated by the Tesla coil. The toroid field balances electrostatic energy to concentrate coronal discharge to the arc rod. The Tesla coil construction and toroid are important elements in determining the resonance and output efficiency of the device.

Spectrum Tubes The spectrum tube array generates a natural photon emission replicating atmospheric light. Six unique noble and inert gases that exist in nature produce about 1000 wavelengths in the infrared, far infrared, and visible light spectrum.
