

It's crazy how a casual round of golf

can turn into an overpriced nature walk.

Your clubs are clean. Your buddies are free. The tee time is penciled-in on everyone's calendar. A box of new golf balls sits on your front porch waiting to be unpacked and stored away in your bag. As the big weekend draws near, daydreams of picture-perfect golf consume your headspace. There's a long day on your horizon of driving the fairway, finding the green, and (hopefully) sinking a few birdie putts.

Saturday finally rolls around, and you arrive at the clubhouse just in time. It's a beautiful day for 18 holes, the grass is in pristine condition, and—for once in your life—the course isn't filled with groups of amateur golfers watching your every shot. You're finally relaxed and ready to play...Who knows? Today might be the day you break 80.

But, after slicing your first tee shot into the thickest part of the jungle and forming an impromptu search committee, you remember something. Golf is an easygoing sport that's extremely hard to play. Sure, the game is supposed to be a relaxing challenge for the body and mind, but sometimes it'll make you want to hurl that 7-iron into the depths of the nearby lake.

We've all been there at one point or another, and now, Peninsula Golf Center is here to help! Our facility is the place where golfers come to refine their swing for just a few bucks at a time. Hop on Mercury Boulevard, buy a bucket of balls at an unmatched price, and get a feel for each of your clubs before your next golf outing.
