To whom it may concern:

The City of Winslow, Arizona located in Arizona's majestic Navajo County, is pleased to support Potash Arizona as an economic development project for Navajo County and beyond. The City of Winslow, only 32 miles away from Potash Arizona's future worksite, will benefit immensely from the regional economic and workforce development that Potash Arizona will bring.

It is the city's understanding that potash, a mineral compound that contributes to fertilizer, has been declared a critical mineral by President Trump and his administration. As the United States relies on 95% of its potash from abroad, developing potash in our nation is of utmost importance for our nation's national security. That Navajo County will play an integral role in continuing to contribute to our nation's food supply chain, is a patriotic effort the City of Winslow wholeheartedly supports.

Soon, the City of Winslow will invest heavily with future partners in the infrastructure of transportation. With the 1-40 route, the railroad lines connecting the east and west of our country, and new business development in the region, Potash Arizona will benefit from the City's investment and growth.

We support Potash Arizona and continue to look ways to support the project and its development.

Sincerely,

Jack Fitchett
