“Hello,

I am a local job seeker reaching out with concerns about wage discrepancies on the federal Job Bank that may warrant investigation.

While applying for administrative roles, I’ve noticed Canadian citizens are routinely offered $18–$22/hour locally, while similar Office Administrator positions on Job Bank advertise wages of $35–$37.50/hour and are open to temporary foreign workers. Despite applying to these higher-wage roles and meeting qualifications, I’ve received no responses.

I believe this raises questions about the purpose of some Job Bank postings and whether they are being used to facilitate LMIA processes rather than genuine local hiring.

I have screenshots and documentation available and would be happy to speak further if this is of interest.”
