

A Blueprint for 21st Century Leadership and Economic Empowerment

Seize the Future: The Boulé as a Force for Change

Frequently Asked Questions

Q: Why are you releasing this book now during ongoing legal matters?

A: This book was written before the current disputes and reflects the forward-looking vision for which I was elected. Because a limited number of copies were prematurely circulated, I am releasing the full work so Archons can engage directly with the complete ideas, rather than seeing selective excerpts taken out of context. Transparency best serves the Fraternity.

Q: Does this book reveal confidential Fraternity information?

A: No. No. The book contains no rituals, ceremonies, or proprietary material. It discusses our public-facing structure, demographic trends we have routinely shared with sponsors, and a strategic vision for economic empowerment and global engagement.

Q: Is publishing this book against Fraternity policy or precedent?

A: No. Past Grand Sire Archon Rodney Reed and other authors have published works about the Fraternity's history and mission, available publicly on platforms like Amazon. Publishing thoughtful works on our past and future has clear precedent within Sigma Pi Phi.

Q: What kind of demographic data is included, and is it appropriate to share?

A: The book includes aggregate demographic information—education levels, professions, geographic distribution—that is identical to the data shared with corporate sponsors and in annual reports. It contains no personal or identifying information.

Q: Are you criticizing other Archons in this book?

A: The book discusses leadership principles and organizational best practices applicable to any institution. No individuals are named in critical contexts. It focuses on building our future through economic empowerment and strategic partnerships. This book is about building tomorrow, not revisiting yesterday.

Q: Is this just a rehash of previous speeches and articles?

A: The book builds on my speeches, newsletters, and articles in The Boulé Journal, but it goes further. It presents the full strategic framework, detailed implementation paths, and previews concepts from my forthcoming book The Power Doctrine, Building Black Wealth, Influence, and Institutions That Last which examines American power structures and the role of Artificial Intelligence in wealth creation.

Q: Are you profiting from the Fraternity's name and reputation?

A: Like any author, I receive royalties per book — a standard practice with clear precedent in our Fraternity. This book is my intellectual work product, representing years of thought leadership and strategic development, and it served as the foundation for my administration's theme, priorities, and contribution to our collective discourse. Importantly, my financial contributions to the Boulé Foundation far exceed any royalties this book may generate. I have already given at the Franklin level ($75,000) and intend to reach the Clemons level ($100,000). This work represents my strategic vision for our shared future, not a profit-seeking endeavor.

Q: Should we be concerned about how non-members might perceive this book?

A: No. The book highlights Sigma Pi Phi as a forward-thinking institution committed to economic empowerment, education, and community service. It reinforces the Fraternity's role as a positive force for leadership and impact in the 21st century.

Q: What if I disagree with ideas in the book?

A: Healthy debate strengthens our Fraternity. This book is meant to spark dialogue about the future. I welcome thoughtful engagement with its ideas, whether in agreement or constructive dissent.

Q: When will "The Power Doctrine" be released?

A: The Power Doctrine: Building Black Wealth, Influence, and Institutions that Last is in final editing and expected within the next month. It offers deeper analysis of wealth-building strategies and the structural dynamics of American power.

Seize the Future joins a tradition of Boulé literature that includes works by Past Grand Sire Archons and our official histories, all of which contribute to the ongoing dialogue about our Fraternity's evolution and impact.*
