The circa 1865 Italianate brick home, with clapboard rear addition, was built by the J. Rice family in a popular late 19th Century style. The house and the large, fine circa 1855 barn behind the home were once part of a large dairy and grain farm that had been owned and operated by only two families, that of J. Rice followed by that of Issac Hill, until 1973, at which time Martin Grimm of Utica bought the property for his daughter Carolyn Grimm Hemming. Over thirteen acres of this eighty-acre parcel lie within the Village. Carolyn and her husband Dennis created the proprietorship known as Marty's Barn Cellar and, in the barn, established a natural wood furniture business. A large showroom addition has been attached to the southern end of the barn.

This was the home of J. D. Rhoades, circa 1849. It is Greek Revival in style and has had many additions, including an Eastlake porch.

Owners have included: Amelia and Frank Hill, Judge and Mrs. Fred Tuttle, Howard and Doris Mott, and Elaine and Jack Cooper. Since 1989, it has been the home of Barbara and Vincent Ely.

The first English-American settlers in the Village of Elbridge were Captian William and Elizabeth (Betsy) Stevens and family in 1793. In 1795, Betsy was the first person to be buried in the present Town of Elbridge.

In 1793, Robert Fulton arrived in Elbridge.

Between 1795 and 1800, the first blacksmith arrived in Elbridge, a Mr. Potter.

The Cyrus Sweet home, French 2nd Empire style, was built circa 1871. Originally the Sweet Tavern, the builder used a form of curb roof, the lower slope of which approached the vertical and usually contained the dormer windows, while the upper slope is nearly flat. Such a roof style was designed by and named for N. F. Mansard, the designer of the roof for the Palace at Versailles. It is the only building of its kind in the Village. The cupola has been removed, the one-story portion on the west side of the house is an addition, and parts of the first-floor porch roof are missing. The center door and window above and two arched windows in the mansard roof are noteworthy. At one time the house was the homestead for the Price Family Farm. It was then sold to the Charles Norvells and, in 1977, to Manford Place. Owned since 1989 by Jeffery Sherman, it is a multi-family dwelling. It is an Onondaga County Landmark.

The rear portion of this home is a vernacular structure with Greek Revival proportions. The front addition, newer than the rear (a not uncommon occurrence), dates from the last quarter of the 19th century. The names of the builders are unknown. It was occupied by the Donald Peers until it was sold in 1998 to Jacqueline and Dwayne Holbert.

The E. Marks house is a small Greek Revival structure built as a home in the 1830's-40's at which time it had very nice French windows. The house has been owned by Jay MacCollum (who had a homemade candy shop there), Iva MacCollum, and Shirleyann and James Redmond. Many changes were made when the building became the office of Dr. David Martin, an internist. The windows were updated, the shutters were removed, and the building was re-sided.

In 1795, Moses Carpenter opened the second tavern in Elbridge.
