

SOUTH SIDE – EAST MAIN STREET

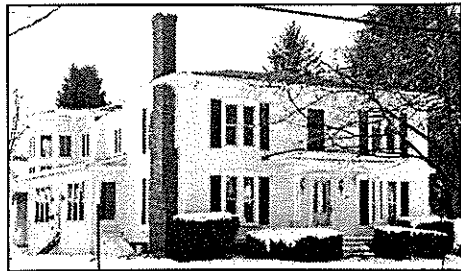

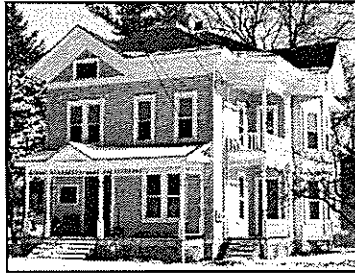

NORTH SIDE – EAST MAIN STREET

*In 1800, the Elbridge
Congregational Church was founded.
Rev. Seth Williston was its first pastor.*

In 1805, Levi Clark arrived in Elbridge.

216 E. Main

The builder of this circa 1870 Queen Anne style home with some Italianate elements is unknown. The home was once part of the Luke Ranney farm. Mr. Ranney was also a partner in the Clark and Ranney chair manufacturing business (National Chair), and he used his house for part of the work: A roll of carpeting was hung from the second floor rear, dropped through a trap door to the first floor, where the imported Brussels Carpet was cut into chair seat and back lengths. The home, owned by the Ranneys, Maxons and now Meixners, has been divided into apartments. The exterior has had some alteration.

214. E. Main
The builder of this circa 1860 Italianate home, also once owned by Luke Ranney, is unknown. It has very nice detailing, particularly the quoining. The building has been extensively changed, especially since renovations and additions begun in 1993. Owners include the Ranneys, the H. O. Clarks, the Dr. and Mrs. George Chamberlin, and current residents Mary and Harry Armani.

*In 1807-08, Squire Munro and his sons built an 11-mile section of the tolled, plank Genesee Road (Turnpike)
between Elbridge and Camillus.
This road later gave way to the free Syracuse and Elbridge plank road.*

Deacon Isaac Hill arrived in Elbridge in 1810.

239 E. Main

The bank building with the mansard roof was constructed in 1969-70 by owner Lawrence E. Gray, who leased it to Merchants National Bank and Trust Company of Syracuse. It served as ONBANK from 1993 to 1998, and since 1998 as M&T. (No photo)

PLANTATION PLAZA — Construction started in 1981. (No photo)

223 E. Main

The builder of this probably late 1840's home is unknown. Architecturally it is made up of a combination of styles: Greek Revival proportions with cornice brackets and modified Egyptian porch columns. Note the wrought iron grilles on the upper windows. The garage on the west side is an addition. The land was once a part of the William S. Brown farm (1920's to 1930's), then another Brown family (who were not relatives of William) in the 1940's, and Bill Bailey in the 1950's. Katherine and Arthur Slavin purchased the home and land, upon which they established the Slavin Nursery business. The property is presently owned by Edward Sieklucki and Grace Pitman.

In 1810, Dr. Sweet arrived in Elbridge, as did Timothy Brown.

The Elbridge post office also opened in 1810.

219 E. Main

This rather unusual home was built, circa 1834, as a two-room office for Dr. H. E. Roberts. It is an extremely scaled-down Greek Revival with a portico front, which was probably added to the original building. The east side addition was probably constructed about 1870. Charles Harrington, the druggist who operated the pharmacy and ice cream parlor at 110 East Main for many, many years, occupied this house for 45 years. Other residents have included Edith and Cyrus Wright, Winifred and DeVillo Sloan, Jr., Kathy and Robert Petrocci, and presently by Kathleen and John Norman.

