

Candidate:

Alexandra del Moral Mealer

When a candidate says something ridiculous, we look into it.

When a candidate continues to defend the obvious lie, we dig deeper.

When a candidate refuses to answer job interview questions, we hire researchers and private investigators.

Any candidate for public office is applying for a public service job to work for you and me, the taxpayers, and their record and behavior should be examined closely.

This is one of a seven-part series of the Mealer inconsistencies:

Analyzing Alexandra del Moral Mealer's ridiculous claims

Award by Los Angeles City Council in 1983 to Armando Del Moral. The 3 signers were communist sympathizers at best:

Arthur K Snyder, Democrat, political career derailed for selling his influence on council to Chinese Communists among others

Joel Wachs, Democrat, married to a man, allied with Snyder & Ferraro on 99.9% of their votes that supported communist Chinese investment group for the corrupt housing project

John Ferraro, Democrat, allied with LA Communist Party on Housing deal & CCP visits to Taiwan China paid for by Chinese CCP government covered in LA Times repeatedly

Top Researchers identified: no bars, no stripes, no awards, no decoration of any kind

“An honorable discharge at entry level rank when the USA was actively drafting for WW2 and that company was deploying in the North Atlantic signed by the wrong rank of a General already deployed in North Africa all by itself make this photo highly suspect...the fake discharge document confirms it.”

It is a felony to steal valor from the US Military.

NO record of Armando del Moral serving in the US Army and being honorably discharged on Oct 7th 1943 exists in any Govt service, payroll or health record database or private military history database according to the 2 top WW2 US Military Research Historians w/ top secret clearance and more than 60 years in DOD Natl Archive background research.

Officer's Signature had incorrect rank for that officer at that time period and more telling is that the officer was in North Africa in 1943.

National Archive Office of Inspector General immediately opened a fraud investigation case #2-26502558275

(See full report with more than 20 govt and private military history databases result showing “0” record del Moral or his supposed service number)

Active-duty Marine & Army as well as retired performed this research & the office of Marine Quarter Master General turned the case over to Office of Inspector General for Fraud. Stolen Valor is a federal felony.

Alex Claims that Armando was liberating people in Spain and was jailed for it.

The historical record has multiple accounts of Armando aligning himself with the Soviet & Mexican Communist Party and mounting a coup against the Nationalist Labor Party and failing, fleeing to France where his brother spent time in a concentration camp, but, no record of Armando jailed that we can find.

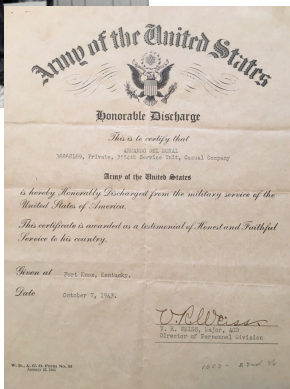

1939 Armando fled France after less than 2 months for Mexico City where he wrote propaganda for Mexico's Presidente supported by communist labor party and emerging film industry

Armando never even once in any of his 40 boxes of writings & diaries mentions in his own biography or any other records any US Military Service but solidly confirms himself in Mexico and Central America 1939-1943

Armando del Moral the writer

According to many of Armando del Moral's published articles from Mexico City which place him in Mexico city and Armando del Moral's numerous biographical well established first-hand account and claims, the historical record is that he was in Mexico City and Central America nearly 5 years from 1939 to 1943 and not serving in the US Army. He was working as a reporter and Newspaper Publisher, in his own words:

During this time, he worked as a reporter, editor, editorialist and chief editor of the newspaper "El Mexicano" (Mexico's communist labor party propaganda paper) publishing in 1942 a series on the "braceros" which Mexico's Presidente Miguel Aleman made required reading in public schools after 1946. Pres Aleman outwardly claimed to be anti-communist but had long been propped up by the Mexican Labor Party which was an entirely communist organization and praised Armando for the article publicly. Braceros was the term for the 1.6m migrant Mexican farm workers in the US during WW2 and after.

Armando claims to have relocated to Los Angeles in 1943 where he remained until the day he died...in his own words.

Alexandra del Moral Mealer's Instagram post looks to be an attempt to obtain credibility from her now deceased grandfather's notoriety.

She never expected to have the signers' names researched. They turned out to be LA Communists making scandalous deals with the CCP on a housing project in LA.

A simple google search of each name produces plentiful hits of their corruption and failed political careers.

Members of the Spanish Royal Family that know who the del Moral family really is surprised us with their comment on Alexandra del Moral Mealer's Instagram page.

That comment came directly from a family member

There a reason they "still track the del Moral family...it's because the Communist del Moral's damn near killed Spain's royal family. You don't forget that kind of thing." –King Fernando II of Spain

“To my good friend and compatriot Armando del Moral for your fight for the revolution”
signed: Fidel Castro, New York 1955

“Prepared for Armando del Moral 1955” verified by the auction house historians as Armando del Moral

When confronted with this historical record, rather than admit her grandfather and grandmother’s families were known communist in Spain that fled to Hollywood to work for the Hollywood Foreign Press, Alexandra del Moral Mealer burst into an angry rage claiming her “grandfather was a freedom fighter trying to save people’s lives.”

The fact is Armando mounted a failed communist coup against Franco and most of his co-conspirators were hanged and shot in the head while he and his brother fled to France then he to Mexico City.

Mealer refuses to address the now proven fact that her entire family line from Spain were well known communist anarchists attempting to overthrow both King Alfonso XIII then Armando (Alex’s grandfather) mounted a failed coup against Gen Franco backed by Soviet and Mexico’s Communist parties.

Any Spanish Civil War search will provide you ample evidence and even Earnest Hemmingway reported on both families as a war correspondent during this time period before going to live in Fidel Castro’s Cuba.

Generational Communist anarchy and acts of terrorism

That is the del Moral and Louzara heritage Alexandra brags about...if you bother to research it, it is well documented. Even our own government had her grandfather on a watch list for it.

While there is no sign that Rudolph or his descendants ever shared the politics of his parents, his sister Amelia certainly did, at least in her youth. Growing up in Detroit with her mother, Aurora, and her adoptive father, Emilio Vivas, she participated in the big family picnics held to raise money for the anarchist and antifascist cause, and she is listed as “Secretary of Propaganda” for Local 17 of the SIA.⁵³ She married the journalist Armando del Moral, a delegate of the Juventudes Libertarias (Libertarian Youth), who was the son of an anarchist and now had become a refugee.⁵⁴ In exile, however, with his hopes for a definitive “struggle for true freedom” crushed, Armando seems to have forsaken old political ties, reinventing himself as a journalist of Spanish-language cinema.⁵⁵ Starting in 1949, Amelia wrote a celebrity gossip column, “Melie Lou en Hollywood,” for his magazine, La Novela Cine-Gráfica (Cine-Graphic News, Los Angeles, 1947–1964, which subsequently became Gráfica, 1964-).⁵⁶ Before the arrival of Armando’s obituary in Variety (which reads like a fairy tale of American success—an immigrant escaping from the fascist prison camps to end up hobnobbing with the likes of Liz Taylor and John Wayne in the Hollywood hills!), del Moral rewrote his own memories: the anarchist campaigner from Albacete who declared, a month after the last surrender of Republican forces, “Spain is not dead!” became, in his own memoirs, a “confused” young man of “centrist opinions.”⁵⁷ In the end, two generations of Spanish anarchists marrying-in would not prove a sufficient barrier against political assimilation: it seems that the children of Armando and Amelia del Moral grew up

The del Moral and Louzara families are well documented anarchists for generations. They brag about it in their memoirs and biographies.

Both families conspired to overthrow Spain’s King Alfonso XIII which destabilized Europe to help start World War 1.

Armando led Catalan Youth uniting with Soviet and Mexico’s Communist parties in an attempted coup against General Franco and failed in 1939 and fled to France then showed up in Mexico City a few months later as writer and editor of “La Mexicana.”

La Mexicana was the Communist Labor Party propaganda outlet and he was praised by Mexico’s President who was installed by that group.

Why doesn't anyone bother to simply do a little research?

It is well documented.

The del Moral's and Louzara families allied themselves with Soviet Communists and Mexico's Communist Party for generations.

They sought a family dynasty to take power through communism.

They write about it.

Anarchist Armando del Moral---→

Others write of it.

Yet, no one bothered to look.

speaking and immigrant communities in the United States have published periodicals that have articulated radical, gender, class, political, and ethnic interests; protected and fostered the language, education, and culture of their ethnic minorities; and denounced totalitarian rule abroad.⁷ The labor and ethnic periodicals connected to workers' associations educated their members in similar ways. Several Spanish-language newspapers praised España Libre's antifascist journalism and reviewed their fundraisers. Among the publications that supported España Libre's work were La Prensa (San Antonio), Pueblos Hispanos (New York), Liberación (New York), and Ecos (New York). Each of these publications would often review commemorations and fundraisers.⁸ Anarchist Armando del Moral, a syndicated journalist for Spanish-language newspapers in the United States, lauded Hispanic comradeship during the commemoration of the Second Republic held by the affiliated association Los Leales in Los Angeles. Del

Moral, a Spanish Civil War refugee himself, recalls how Spaniards cheered "Mexico" at the event, one of the few countries granting resident visas to fleeing Spaniards.⁹ Antifascism united Hispanic communities in the United States.

These long-established newspapers offered jobs to Spanish migrants and exiles. Making use of this broader network among the Spanish-language press, Sergio Aragonés moved from Mexico to New York to further his career as a cartoonist in 1962. His uncle, Manuel Aragonés, who worked with González Malo to provide Mexican visas to refugees, asked him to help his nephew become established in New York. After his arrival, Aragonés's drawings illustrated signs at the regular demonstrations in front of the Spanish Consulate and the United Nations in New York. Aragonés also contributed to España Libre with his antifascist cartoons until 1965, the year of González Malo's death.¹⁰ Helped by Cuban Antonio Prohibas, Aragonés secured a contract with Mad magazine and Spanish Civil War history, news papers and even foreign war correspondents such as Ernest Hemmingway wrote of the del Moral and Louzara family's thirst for power over Spain and their alliances with and backing by the Communist Soviets and Mexico's Communist Party.

The Spanish journals describe them fleeing Spain after their failed coup against General Franco in 1939 and resettled in America.

Below the search bar, it indicates 'Result 1 of 1 in this book for esto armando del moral'. The main content area shows a snippet of text from a book, which is highlighted in yellow. The text discusses the experiences of young people during the Spanish Civil War, mentioning their disillusionment with the older generation and their desire for a new society. The text is in Spanish and includes the name 'Armando del Moral'.

reconociendo la experiencia de los veteranos, curtidos en los sacrificios acarreados por sus luchas contra la opresión, los jóvenes dicen estar dispuestos a contar con su opinión y experiencia cuando la solución a los problemas sobrepase sus fuerzas intelectuales, pero esto no equivale a hacer dejación de su personalidad, ni a fiar en otros lo que debe ser función de la juventud libertaria, y menos aún dejar en manos de los compañeros mayores la construcción de una sociedad nueva, porque, aún suponiéndoles buena voluntad y mejores deseos, la educación que han recibido "es burguesa", viéndose por ello "torpedeados en más de una ocasión por los prejuicios que no han podido desear de si por hallarse muy arraigados". Depositar en estos compañeros los destinos de la nueva sociedad puede desacelerar la transformación social, lo que no es aceptable para los jóvenes ni aconsejable por los momentos que se viven²³. Esta actitud corresponde a los inicios de 1937, pero conforme la guerra avanza y los argumentos de vencer se hacen menos convincentes, la juventud reclama con más fuerza que lo hacían hasta entonces, la responsabilidad y la dirección de los asuntos sociales y militares. Los "viejos" no sólo no han dado muestras de eficacia sino que son los culpables de la situación del país. Paso a la juventud, la única que puede garantizar la revolución. La misión de la juventud - se dice en abril de 1938- se está cumpliendo "con esplendidez", aunque encuentra en su camino no pocos obstáculos -entre ellos el que los "viejos", anarquistas y de otras fuerzas políticas, dirijan la vida del país- sobre lo cual un joven, Armando del Moral, se pronuncia "con serenidad, con justeza y con amplio sentido de equidad":

Un breve relato de los hechos que siguieron a los acontecimientos anteriores, bastará a nuestros lectores.

Desde el día siguiente, el maestro de obras, acompañado por el contratista, y al que refirió cuanto ya sabemos, se dirigieron al Palacio de Justicia, donde indagaron el nombre del juez instructor encargado de la causa de Pedro Landry.

El contratista era rico, apreciado y tenía gran influencia con los hombres de negocios, así como en la Bolsa. Su palabra era dinero. Sus afirmaciones hacían siempre gran peso.

El juez de instrucción prometió tener al reo todas aquellas consideraciones compatibles con el rigor y deberes del magistrado.

En efecto, al siguiente día, después del primer interrogatorio, concedió al procesado libertad bajo fianza. Esta fianza la prestó el contratista.

Pedro Landry volvió a su casa

—Y vuestros acreedores?
—No hay ruegos que los apaiden y yo nada puedo ofrecerles, porque no veo la probabilidad de cumplir. Esta mañana he recibido la visita del apoderado general del proveedgr de forrajes.
—Y qué os ha dicho?
—Que no tenía más remedio que declararme en quiebra pasado mañana, si no saldaba la cuenta en el término de cuarenta y ocho horas.
—Y qué pensáis hacer?
—Nada, puesto que no tengo dinero para verificar el pago.
—Pero una quiebra es la ruina!
—Es algo peor que la ruina, es la prisión.
—Y no pñder ayudaros! Ah, si yo fuera rico!
—Me salvariais, ya lo sé—replicó la viuda—; pero, qué queréis: los que tienen buen corazón no tienen dinero, y los que lo tienen carecen de entrañas. No sostengo que esto sea verdad en absoluto, pero es muy frecuente.

Several Hollywood McCarthy era time piece modern day motion pictures, make direct allusion to the Hollywood Foreign Press, del Moral and or his wife the gossip columnist Amelia Louzara del Moral.

Her pen name was "Melie Lou in Hollywood" for Graphica and others.

Time piece movies such as "Trumbo", "Good Night and Good Luck", "The Aviator" and more directly refer to the communists at the Hollywood Foreign Press and the Gossip Columnist. It was a well-known open secret that the founder of the HFPA & Golden Globes that hired Armando del Moral was openly a communist. Her name was Nora Laing (pictured below).

The National Archives were exhaustively searched by the two top DOD research experts with Top Secret Clearance & 60 years experience in military records validation and concluded that the Army Honorable Discharge document was fraudulent

Name	Armando Del Moral
Social Security Number	453-32-6760
Birth Date	15 Jun 1916
Issue year	Before 1951
Issue State	Texas
Last Residence	91605, North Hollywood, Los Angeles, California, USA
Death Date	21 Jul 2009
Collection	Social Security Death Index

At the bottom of the record, there are three buttons: "SAVE", "PRINT", and "ATTACH TO TREE". To the right, a "CERTIFICATES" section offers access to official government issued vital records, including birth, death, marriage, and divorce records, with an "ORDER NOW" link.

Researchers amassed a good amount of data suggesting that the Army Honorable Discharge document Alexandra del Moral Mealer published for Armando del Moral was likely a fraud.

1943 was a record year of communist infiltrating the US with fake military credentials seeking citizenship as D-Day WW2 approached.

Retired and active-duty military researchers concluded it warranted fraud investigation and reported the entire file to the Army Quartermaster General's office who immediately filed an investigation with National Archives office of Inspector General. The Office of Inspector General of the National Archives completed their investigation and concluded this:

ARMANDO DEL MORAL was NEVER ENLISTED in the US Armed Forces

He was "inducted" into the US Army July 15th 1943 for 90 days, debriefed by War Department's Military Intelligence Division, better known as the G-2 (now CIA) to provide information regarding the Spanish Coup attempt he led against General Franco in 1939 allied with the Soviet and Mexico communist parties supporting his efforts in Spain. Del Moral did this in exchange for US Citizenship.

Del Moral was granted an honorable discharge from the US Army and allowed to apply for citizenship 90 days later at Fort Knox Kentucky never having served or being "enlisted". Basically, he told on his old allies, friends and compatriots to gain US citizenship.

Armando and his wife Emilia Louzara del Moral are well documented communists starting as early as the 1936 Spanish Revolution. They are in fact so proud of their anarchist communism, they outline their family tree with ancestors of family anarchist Communist activism.

The del Moral and Louzara families were well documented for generations of communist supported coup attempts in Spain. Spanish Civil War historians and Correspondents covering the Spanish Civil War on the ground documented the del Moral and Louzara communist backed efforts in detail in attempts to overthrow Spain's King Alfonso XIII which helped start WW1.

Armando Del Moral's communist backed efforts to overthrow General Franco in 1939 failed and he and his brother fled to France then Armando ended up in Mexico City that same year of 1939 through 1943.

Amelia worked as a Hollywood gossip columnist and with the Hollywood Foreign Press association as well, just like Armando Del Moral.

This is well documented in historical literature on the Spanish Civil War. The Communist Anarchists are celebrated as is their infiltration into the western world, especially the United States. Colonies of Spanish Communist Anarchist that fled Spain after a failed communist coup attempt were all over the United States.
