Record Increases in Spending Continue as State Revenues Slow!

The Delaware State Budget growing and growing!

- Pete duPont Trend (1970-1994): Trend: Had this continued, the 2024 budget would be $3 billion, half the current $6 billion, implying greater wealth for Delawareans.
- Tom Carper Trend (1994-2019): Under Governor Tom Carper, spending increased 60% faster due to new unclaimed property and gambling revenues. This would result in a 2024 budget of $5 billion.
- John Carney Trend: Beginning in 2021, federal aid during the pandemic increased the budget by $1 billion above the Carper trend, a 20% rise.

The current state government is spending more and growing at a faster rate than ever before. The state is already the largest employer and the new proposal to spend more keep coming. How do we ensure quality of life in Delaware and balance the budget?

What Happens As The Economy Slows?

Delaware's Economy Shrinks in 2023: Only State with lower GDP than the previous year.

DOVER, DE: In 2022, Delaware's Gross Domestic Product (GDP) reached approximately $75.17⁵ billion. However, 2023 saw a slight decline, with the state's real GDP dropping to $74.26 billion. This decrease in economic output marks a slower growth rate compared to the overall U.S. average during the same period. Delaware was the only state to show a decline in GDP over the period.

When compared to neighboring states such as Maryland, New Jersey, and Pennsylvania, Delaware's economic performance appears relatively modest. While the national economy has shown resilience and growth, Delaware's economic indicators suggest a need for revitalized strategies to boost local industry and business environments.

The state's modest economic performance highlights potential areas for development and investment to ensure future growth aligns more closely with regional and national trends. As Delaware moves forward, addressing these economic challenges will be crucial for sustaining and enhancing the state's economic well-being.

Additionally, the slowing state revenue growth, attributed to the underperformance of Delaware's economy, is expected to impact future state budgets. This financial constraint underscores the urgency for proactive measures to stimulate economic activity and secure the state's fiscal health. Addressing these economic challenges will be crucial for sustaining and enhancing Delaware's economic well-being.

Kirkwood Highway Set for Transformation: Community Feedback Shapes Future Plans

Wilmington, DE — The future of Kirkwood Highway is taking shape, with community input guiding the Kirkwood Highway Land Use and Transportation Plan. At the May 22nd Advisory Committee meeting, members provided insights to help redesign the corridor between Newark and Wilmington.

The plan envisions Kirkwood Highway as a multimodal corridor, shifting from auto-oriented design to one promoting biking, walking, rolling, and transit use. This transformation aims for safe, accessible transportation and enhanced connectivity to schools, parks, and businesses.

The Advisory Committee, comprising representatives from local organizations like the NCC Chamber of Commerce, Town of Elsmere, and Delaware

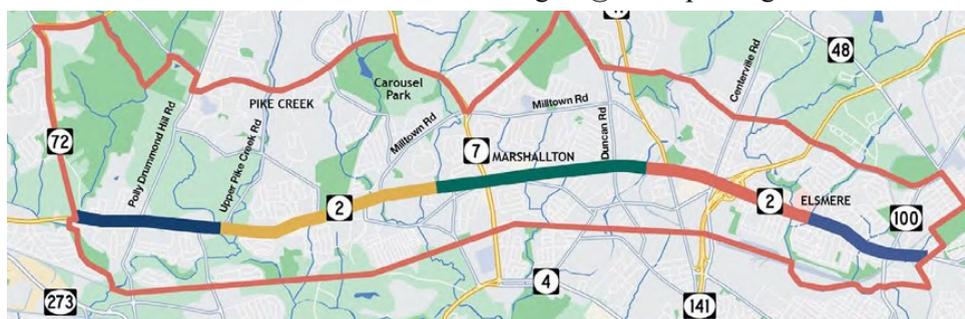

State University, plays a key role in providing feedback, though it doesn't make decisions. Their local knowledge aids the project team in shaping recommendations.

Despite projected declines in population and employment—losing about 1,300 residents and 1,400 jobs over 30 years—market demand exists for approximately 1,000 new dwelling units. Mixed-use development in aging commercial centers and converting commercial properties to residential use are being considered to address high vacancy rates post-pandemic.

Enhanced transit elements are crucial, with a proposed budget under $200 million potentially securing federal funding. Proposals include a new Route 56, micro-transit services, enhanced bus shelters, and improved pedestrian access to stops.

Community members are encouraged to provide feedback online at www.wilmapco.org/Kirkwood and attend the next public workshop in the fall. For more information, contact project manager Dave Gula at dgula@wilmapco.org.

How Much Money Do We Need To Run Delaware?

Delaware's Revenues Go, So Goes Spending! What Happens When Revenues Stop Going Up and Governor Candidates Promise Even More New Spending?

By Charlie Copeland

Governor Carney came into office in 2017 facing a $400 million deficit and vowed not to leave his successor with the same problem. He won't, but his successor's problem will likely be much worse. Governor Carney has dramatically increased the State's base spending level while presiding over a flat economy.

History shows that higher spending requires higher revenues, but the revenue forecast for the state is essentially flat for the next couple of years.

During the COVID-19 pandemic, Delaware's government dramatically increased spending to match COVID-19 revenues. This higher spending base means there is an inherent demand for more spending to support the higher salaries and more programs added during the COVID-19 spendathon.

One example of higher spending is in education. Education spending has risen 34% in the last eight years despite the drastic decline in education outcomes. Another spending example comes from the Governor's budget proposal for Medicaid, which is "nearly 40% of the operating budget growth [in the proposed budget]." The state significantly expanded the Medicaid rolls in Delaware during COVID-19, and the costs are now "built-in." Education and Medicaid account for half of Delaware's spending. Despite the flat revenue forecast, the major gubernatorial candidates are all touting 20% plus spending increases in education, "green" energy subsidies, Medicaid, etc. These spending proposals will rapidly eliminate John Carney's attempted budget reserve.

Ask the Governor Candidates!! I'm suggesting that Voters in Delaware ask every candidate for Governor where the money comes from when the economy slows down and the growth of government does not!

Delaware State Government Spending Much Higher than the Budget Suggests

In a recent revelation, the actual amount of money spent by the Delaware State Government has been unveiled to be significantly higher than previously understood. According to the National Association of State Budget Officers (NASBO), Delaware's total expenditures for the fiscal year (FY) 2023 reached a staggering $15.5 billion. This figure encompasses general funds, other state funds, bonds, and federal funds.

The disclosure comes in the wake of NASBO's comprehensive report, which indicated that total expenditures across all states for FY 2022 amounted to $2.9 trillion. These expenditures varied widely among states, from a low of $4.7 billion in Wyoming to a high of $467.6 billion in California.

Delving deeper into Delaware's financial landscape, NASBO's data highlights the state's recent expenditure trends. The figures reveal a consistent increase in spending over the past few years:

- FY 2023: General fund spending was $5.9 billion, with total spending, including federal transfers, hitting $15.5 billion.
- FY 2022: General fund spending was $5.1 billion, with total spending at $14.4 billion.
- FY 2021: General fund spending was $4.5 billion, with total spending at $13.3 billion.
- FY 2020: General fund spending was $4.5 billion, with total spending at $11.9 billion.
- FY 2019: General fund spending was $4.4 billion, with total spending at $11.3 billion.

These numbers underscore a significant upward trajectory in Delaware's expenditures, reflecting both the growth in state-funded initiatives and the substantial influx of federal funds, particularly in response to the COVID-19 pandemic.

A striking aspect of this financial surge is its contrast with Delaware's population growth rate, which has hovered around 1% annually. This disparity suggests that the state's spending growth has vastly outpaced its population increase, raising questions about the sustainability and efficiency of such fiscal policies.

For those seeking more information on Delaware's budgetary details, comprehensive resources are available through the State of Delaware Office of Management and Budget, the Delaware Department of Finance, and Delaware's Transparency Resources.

As Delawareans come to grips with these figures, the state's fiscal management and future spending strategies will undoubtedly be topics of keen public interest and scrutiny.

“Pending Financial Crisis” is an Opportunity for Common Sense

By Rep. Michael Ramone
Candidate for Governor of Delaware

The Delaware State Budget has seen unprecedented growth in recent years. This money was to have solved our states most pressing problems. Instead, we not only don't solve the current problems, things got worse in our State. And, now we are looking to start new State Government programs to address new problems we created or never solved.

As we watch young legislators promise more and more government solutions to their voters, we must also heed the warning signs on the horizon. The growth in spending of our state government is not sustainable. We are on the cusp of a downturn in state revenue, a looming reality that we cannot ignore. As we navigate this impending challenge, we must be prepared to face some very difficult trade-offs.

Healthcare, education, housing and essential services are critical programs. They are the sectors that directly impact the lives of our citizens and shape the future of our state. However, in the face of dwindling revenues, what do we cut first.

This is not a time for despair, but a call to action. It is a time for us to use common sense and think differently about solving our problems.

We must look beyond traditional big government solutions. We won't always have the money to spend on more new government. When the money runs out, we can't just raise taxes. We can't collect more from business in taxes, or collect more from people who sell their homes. We should not make it more expensive to be a teacher and live in Delaware. Our kids won't come back home if the further destroy economic growth. If we blindly can push more of the burden on to businesses, because they will move or simply won't consider Delaware.

It's time to rethink the role of government in Delaware. We must use common sense approach to State Budgeting. We can't allow the Delaware economy to be the only one getting smaller.

We need to go back to basic economics, we need look at where regulations are more a burden and than a protection of the public. Perhaps we need less government mandates and more collaboration between the regulators, the public and business leaders.

Government has a role, but so does the private sector. State Government can't run the economy, decide what car you drive, who can open a new medical practice and run grocery stores in low income communities.

Expanding the State Government has not solved the education program: we still have 58% of public school students who can't read a grade level.

In conclusion, the growth of the Delaware State Budget and the pending revenue decline presents us with both opportunities and challenges. As we chart our course forward, we must strike a balance between leveraging our current growth and preparing for future uncertainties. It will not be an easy task, but with foresight, innovation, and a commitment to our citizens, we can ensure a sustainable future for Delaware.

Delaware Economy Shrinks, Only State with a lower GDP than last year!

WILMINGTON, DE: According to data compiled by Visual Capitalist and released in an infographic earlier this month, Delaware had the Lowest Real Gross Domestic Product (GDP) of any state in the nation in 2023. GDP is the total monetary value of all the finished goods and services produced within a particular jurisdiction over a specific period and functions as a broad measure of economic health. Visual Capitalist noted that "while the U.S. economy defied expectations in 2023, posting 2.5% in real GDP growth, several states lagged behind. Delaware witnessed the slowest growth in the country, with real GDP growth of -1.2% over the year, as a sluggish finance and insurance sector dampened the state's economy." Delaware was the only state posting a negative GDP growth rate. The First State's poor performance outpaced #2 on the list, Wisconsin, by more than a full percentage point.

growth outpace national averages. Demographics play a crucial role, with an aging population and higher rates of chronic disease exacerbated by social determinants like poverty and food scarcity. Despite high spending, Delaware's healthcare outcomes rank 31st nationally, with elevated rates of cancer, cardiovascular disease, diabetes, infant mortality, and premature death. Healthcare infrastructure is concentrated, with six acute care hospital systems, leading to inefficiencies and inflated costs without commensurate health improvements.

Delaware House Minority Leader Proposes Income Tax Relief Bill

PIKE CREEK, DE: In a bid to provide relief to Delaware residents, House Minority Leader Mike Ramone has put forth a bill aimed at offering income tax relief. The proposal, if enacted, would bring significant changes to the state's tax structure. Ramone's bill seeks to replace the current six personal income tax brackets with three new brackets, along with raising the minimum income subject to tax. The anticipated tax savings under the proposal could reach up to 25% for some earners. Despite Ramone's argument that the bill could stimulate the economy, it faced obstacles in a Democrat-led committee in the state House. While acknowledging the need for modifications, Ramone clarified that he wouldn't push for a floor vote without necessary adjustments.

Delaware's Healthcare Spending Exceeds National Average

DOVER, DE: Healthcare spending per capita in Delaware surpasses the national average, with costs consuming a significant portion of the state's budget—approximately 25% or $1 billion in FY 2017. Medicaid costs and spending

Senator Proposes Government-Run Grocery Stores to Combat Food Insecurity

WILMINGTON, DE, Delaware State Senator Darius Brown (d) introduces Senate Bill 254, proposing government-run grocery stores in Wilmington to address food insecurity. The Delaware Grocery Initiative aims to map food deserts and provide financial aid to various grocery store models, including for-profit, non-profit, cooperative, and government-run establishments. With 12.6% of Delaware's population, including nearly 20% of children, facing food insecurity, the initiative's $500,000 operating budget signifies a vital investment in community welfare. As debates unfold, stakeholders anticipate potential transformations in Wilmington's food landscape, highlighting the broader fight against food insecurity statewide.

Delaware House Passes Bill to Subsidize Home EV Charger Installations

DOVER, DE: Delaware's House approved House Substitute 2 for House Bill 13, securing financial aid for residents to purchase and install home electric vehicle (EV) chargers. The bill, passed by a vote of 21 to 13, allocates assistance through the Delaware Sustainable Energy Utility (DSEU), funded by the Regional Greenhouse Gas Initiative. Low-income applicants could receive up to 90% of the costs, while others could get up to 50%. However, details on eligibility criteria and funding allocation remain unclear. The measure heads to the Senate Environment, Energy & Transportation Committee for review.

Former Teacher Matt Meyer Unveils Ambitious Education Spending Plan

NEW CASTLE, DE: Despite spending more than 41 other states per student, former public school teacher and leader of Delaware's largest local government, Matt Meyer, has unveiled a comprehensive 23-page education blueprint for the 2024 gubernatorial race to increase spending by over $3000 per student. Crafted in collaboration with state educators, Meyer's plan addresses urgent education challenges in the state. In his plan: Matt Meyer aims to modernize the school funding formula, proposing an increase of $3,400 to $6,400 per pupil. He advocates for surpassing starting salaries in neighboring states to tackle the teacher shortage. Meyer pushes for universal pre-K access statewide and aims for grade-level reading proficiency by third grade for all children. Additionally, he guarantees higher education access for Delaware students.
