

Weekly News

Assalaamalaikum Parents. I pray everyone is doing well, Insha'Allah. It has been such a great week back with kindergarten. Our students are learning and growing fast! The biggest improvement I see is in their memory. They are able to recall the beginning blends and the sight words faster than ever before!

I am also very pleased that our kindergarteners are able to now count to 100 too. It is a proud moment in our classroom. Not only this, but they are able to count by 10's and 5's. We are working hard now to count by 2's. It is a huge challenge for our students, so please support them and encourage them.

Finally, thank you for reading every night to your child. They are very happy to receive stickers on their reading log and on the "Story Time" chart. The most important thing is that they are beginning to read on their own and they are very excited to read with you. Thank you again for your support!

Reminders

- Sight Board Test:
Wednesday- January 15:
 I am attaching a list of the sight words your child has trouble remembering to their sight boards; please review these words with them
- Counting test:
Thursday- January 16th
 Your child will recite for me numbers 1-100

Star Student

I have implemented a behavior chart so our students understand what is right and what is wrong. The student who received a perfect score this week was Salsabil Abuhashish. She raises her hand when she needs to tell me something. She always keeps her hands to herself and uses appropriate language. Her work space is always clean as she takes care of herself by being responsible. Finally, she listens and follows all the directions I give in the classroom. It is challenging to receive a perfect score, but Salsabil has done it, m'A!

A Look at Next Week...

I have distributed a winter literacy packet to your child and it is in a ziplock bag placed in their back pack. We will be working from this week. Please review the packet so you are aware as to what our students will be working on this upcoming week.

Insha'Allah, see you all Monday! Have a terrific weekend!
