Healer's Oath

The ethical principles of the Australian Guild of Applied Psychological Efficacy are to be found embodied in the Healer's Oath as administered by the Guild to prospective members.

"I vow that

I will be chaste and ethical in my life as a therapist and that I will be honest - mentally, emotionally, and physically in all my dealings in my profession. I will treat people who seek my help as people and never just as patients. I will ensure that their dignity is preserved at all times.

I will refrain from making claims about my prowess and will not defame other therapists or professions.

I will maintain my ethics and the dignity of my chosen profession in all my dealings with my teachers, my fellow therapists, and with the general public.

I will seek to recognise my limitations, and work to overcome them, but I will always work within the limits of my ability.

Above all: I will do no harm"
