

November 8, 2018:

Fishing this past weekend was on the slow side but still averaging 35 fish a day. We also had some hunters that had good luck. We pulled the rental boat as the weather has turned to winter. We now have snow on the ground and it has been snowing on and off all day.

November 1st, 2018:

This past week has been great for walleye fishing. The water cleared up, walleyes were biting, and some nice slot fish were caught. Most days boaters were averaging close 100 or more fish a day.

October 12-14, 2018:

Friday was nice again with the sun shining but fishing was still slow. It seemed the further east people went the current was faster and the water was dirty. One guy managed to get a 30 inch walleye near Birchdale. Saturday fishing was still slower. On Sunday one group tried the river near us and then headed closer to the lake and ended up catching 16 fish for part of a day. We did get some snow last night but it should be gone soon. The forecast looks like it is going to warm up with it being close to 69 degrees on Thursday.

October 5-11th, 2018:

The weekend and early in the week fishing was pretty good with some boats getting 50-60 fish a day. On Wednesday we had some nasty weather with rain, snow and wind. Most groups didn't try fishing but were eager to get back out on Thursday. We did hear of some slot fish being caught this week on the river.

October 3rd, 2018:

It was a very windy, rainy, and we even saw some snowflakes throughout the day. This crazy weather did not stop people from getting out on the river to try and get some fish. We didn't have a chance to talk to anyone that fished but will keep posting reports as we get them.

October 2nd, 2018:

Sounds like the morning bit was slow for most groups but in the afternoon the fishing did pick up. Groups had their limits in a few hours once the fish were biting and even caught some nice slot fish.

October 1st, 2018:

This past weekend we had quite a few people fishing sturgeon. They seemed to do very well with 5 being keepers and the biggest we heard was 60-1/2" long. One group tried for walleyes earlier in the weekend and good luck.

We talked to a few groups tonight and one group mentioned it was a little slow for them. Another group of 3 said they did really good. Grant went out right before dark for 30 minutes and didn't have any luck. The weather today was gorgeous especially after a cold and windy weekend.

April 28th, 2018:

Looks like a beautiful day on the river. Some groups did good yesterday and some groups didn't catch a sturgeon. Hopefully with the sun and the wind not blowing like crazy it will make the conditions better out there. A friend of ours did catch a 61 inch sturgeon just east of our place.

April 22, 2018:

Most groups had a good weekend of fishing sturgeon. We heard of many being caught in the high 50's and low 60's for size. Sounds like groups caught anywhere from 3-12 sturgeon a day. They did say that the walleyes or some other fish were stealing their worms and would end up bait less.

April 11, 2018:

Yesterday fishing seemed to better for most groups with one group catching 50 fish for the day. We talked to a few people tonight and it sounds like fishing was pretty good again. The weather was sunny and so nice which was a huge change from a few days ago.

April 7, 2018:

The few groups I talked to said fishing was slow. One group had some bites and caught a sturgeon just shy of 60 inches and took about an hour and half to get in. Another group caught 3 big slot fish ranging from 26 inches to around that 28 inch mark. We heard of another sturgeon close to 55 inches being caught.

April 4, 2018:

Last night some guests stopped in and said that fishing was a bit slower and the walleyes were picky. One group did catch a 26" and a 27" in the evening before dark. They said that morning was slowest.

March 30, 2018:

This morning was very cold with temperatures ranging from -1 to 1 degrees. Most groups didn't get out fishing until after 10 am when it warmed up a little bit. One group that fished for a few hours caught their limit, caught some in the mid 20's with the biggest fish being a 28!

March 29, 2018:

Fishing was tough in the morning but seemed to pick up for most groups after 1 pm. Today was very windy but did not stop people from fishing. One group said they caught about 30 fish for half day of fishing with many in the low 20's for size. We did hear some groups were catching bigger fish up by the ice pack.

March 28, 2018:

We had some mix reviews today from groups. Most groups had a great day. A group of 5 brought in their limit and said most of the fish they caught here 18"-19" and no slot fish. Another group that left today said it was a good day and managed to get a slot fish that was in the high 20's. Some others had a tougher time catching some fish.

March 27, 2018:

Some groups did good fishing today with a few slot fish in the lower 20s caught. Another group only caught 6 for the day. Sounds like the weather might of slowed things down a bit for some people.

January 26, 2018:

The ice fishing season started off very good in the beginning, then slowed down for some people groups, and picked up again. Most groups have told us that they are catching some nice keepers for their stay. We have seen some pictures of slot walleyes being caught and some big sturgeon coming thru the ice. Remember there is still time to get a room for your ice fishing trip. Or start thinking about your spring trip and book now for the dates you want.
