Politics of Identity

Course Catalogue Number

73230190LY

Credits

12 EC

Entry requirements

Completed first year of the bachelor's degree programme in Political Science at the UvA and at least 42 EC from the second year, including a Core Module and Onderzoeksmethoden.

Compulsory knowledge

Familiarity with comparative politics and research methods (namely, quantitative methods) would be helpful. If you are unfamiliar with some concepts that will be discussed in class, do not be afraid to ask questions!

The student should be familiar with academic research design. These books provide guidance in conducting quality academic research:

Quantitative research: Kellstedt & Whitten. 2013. The Fundamentals of Political Science Research. Cambridge University Press.

Qualitative research: King, Keohane & Verba. 1994. Designing Social Inquiry: Scientific Inference in Qualitative Research. Princeton University Press.

Quantitative and qualitative research: Brians, Willnat, Rich & Manheim. 2016. Empirical Political Analysis. Routledge.

Course objectives

Students will develop:

1. Empirical and theoretical knowledge on one of the subfields of political science, more specifically 'Politics of Identity'.
2. The ability to analyze and interpret societal and political phenomena.
3. The ability to formulate a research question and make use of academic research methods to answer it in a clearly argued and well-written study.

Course content

Individuals can be defined along group markers that create a – desired or undesired – collective attachment with others. The identification that individuals have towards various groups can have important political impacts.

The course will examine various features of the politics of identity and the diverse theoretical and empirical approaches used to explore the processes that make identities political in different regions of the world. The course will explore political divisions along race, language, religion, gender, and others social markers. It will focus on the manner in which these group identities are constituted and made salient as well as how they mobilise citizens and influence their political opinions and behaviours. The course will survey a range of political phenomena; e.g., intergroup conflict, political mobilisation, discrimination, nationalism, and voting.

The readings will provide a solid foundation on the scholarship interested in intergroup political phenomena. The research project will allow the student to develop their research, writing, analytical and presentation skills.

Teaching methods/learning formats

The course will be taught in the form of a seminar. The sessions will primarily consist of plenary discussions among the students. Therefore, students are expected to prepare for each class by 1) critically reading the assigned literature and 2) formulating questions and topics that they would like to introduce to the discussions.

Students will receive written feedback on their research question, the outline for their paper, as well as the draft and final versions of their thesis.

Manner & Form of Assessment

Thesis (90%) and Participation (10%).

The student will produce a thesis (around 8,000 words). The final version of the thesis must be submitted by 27 January at 12:00 midday. No late submissions will be accepted. For detailed information on the technical requirements of a BA thesis, please consult the following webpage: <http://student.uva.nl/pol/az/item/scriptie.html>.

The student should submit, via Canvas, by 7 November the research question they wish to base their thesis on as well as a short description of the research topic. Furthermore, the student is also to identify the data that they plan to use and the method that they will use to analyse the data.

The research question, the data, and the research method will be the basis of their 3-minute 'Dinner Party Test' (use the short Dunleavy reading for guidance).

The student will, on 9 December, present in class a short, about 10 minutes, up-to-date summary of their research. The aim of the summary is to receive feedback on their project from the supervisor and the other students. The student should submit, via Canvas, by 9 December an outline of their thesis research. The outline will be the basis of their presentation.

The student must submit by 6 January via Canvas a draft version of the thesis. The thesis draft will be the basis for the final feedback before the submission of the final version of the thesis. Written feedback on the thesis draft will be given latest by 20 January.

The student's participation will be evaluated in each session based on class presence as well as the quality of their comments and questions. Furthermore, each readings, starting with the second session (31 October) will be assigned to a student who will have to briefly summarize the reading and launch the discussion on it.

Rules regarding Fraud and Plagiarism

The provisions of the Regulations Governing Fraud and Plagiarism for UvA Students apply in full. Access this regulation at <http://www.student.uva.nl/preventfraud-plagiarism>. Plagiarism is presenting someone else's ideas as your own. Copying, paraphrasing or translating of text needs to be referenced according to academic standards. Plagiarism will be sanctioned severely.

Literature

Book: Lipson, Charles. 2018. How to Write a BA Thesis: A Practical Guide from your First Ideas to your Finished Paper. University of Chicago Press.

This book is not compulsory! But it is highly recommended to guide the student through the process of writing a thesis.

Extensive use will be made of online journal resources via the digital library.

Schedule

28 October Introduction

This meeting will consist of a course presentation, and a brief presentation by the students of their planned topic for their thesis. We will also discuss the assigned readings for this session.
