

DEBUNKING INCLUSIVE EDUCATION MYTHS

Inclusive education benefits all children, not just a few.

1 Inclusion Isn't Unfair

Fairness without justice is not fairness, it's oppression. Inclusion means no child is disadvantaged, ensuring all can thrive together. If inclusion is unfair then it isn't inclusion!

2 Shift to 'Us', Not 'Them'

Being inclusive means seeing all children as part of a collective 'us'. There is no "them" and "us", we are all in this together.

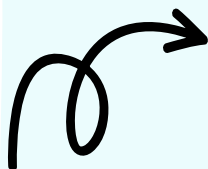

3 Recognised contribution

Inclusion is not a charitable act. Inclusion values each child's individuality and potential. Inclusion recognises that every child makes a valuable contribution.

4 Rejects Narrow 'Normalcy'

Inclusive education challenges conventional notions of learning and being, understanding that we are all diverse. Systems not people are the problem and exclusion isn't the answer.

5 Inclusion is good for all of us

No one is disadvantaged by genuine inclusion. Inclusive settings enhance social, academic, and developmental outcomes for all children.

6 Inclusion Enriches Teaching

Inclusive teachers develop more positive understandings of themselves and their students and are better teachers for everyone.
