ABOUT

Ross is a passionate country-rock singer from Evanston, Illinois, now rooted in rural Oklahoma. Balancing life as a husband, father of three, and musician, he has performed alongside Red Dirt legends like Stoney Larue, Jason Boland & The Stragglers, and rising Alt-Country act The Droptines. His journey began with a high school musical, evolved through Midwest band gigs and a Nashville stint, and was later reignited by memories of his late father, transforming music into a deeply personal outlet.

Ross blends country, classic rock, and soul, delivering performances with both depth and range, aiming to connect with younger audiences while evoking nostalgia in longtime fans. In 2023, his soulful debut on The Voice captured industry attention. His heartfelt rendition of “Blue Ain’t Your Color” earned a four-chair turn and secured him a spot on Team Niall, where he impressed with versatility and emotional performances.

“So consistent, and like no one else on this show... The people of America are going to fall in love with this guy.” – Niall Horan

“Ross is such a talent. His voice is unique, extremely identifiable, and highly attractive to industry executives.” – Reba McEntire
