

2023-2024 Sunset and Sunrise Times Study

Hello, and welcome! If you've found your way here, then you, like me, want to know, once and for all, if the 364-day Enochian calendar model is real. And, if it is real, can it be proven? Can it still be used? Can it replace the Gregorian calendar?

When I started tracking sunsets and sunrises, I set out to prove that a 364-day calendar year occurred within the same length of time as a 365-day year. I thought if I could account for the difference, there would be no more arguments about the length of a year. Unfortunately, I did not prove my theory true.

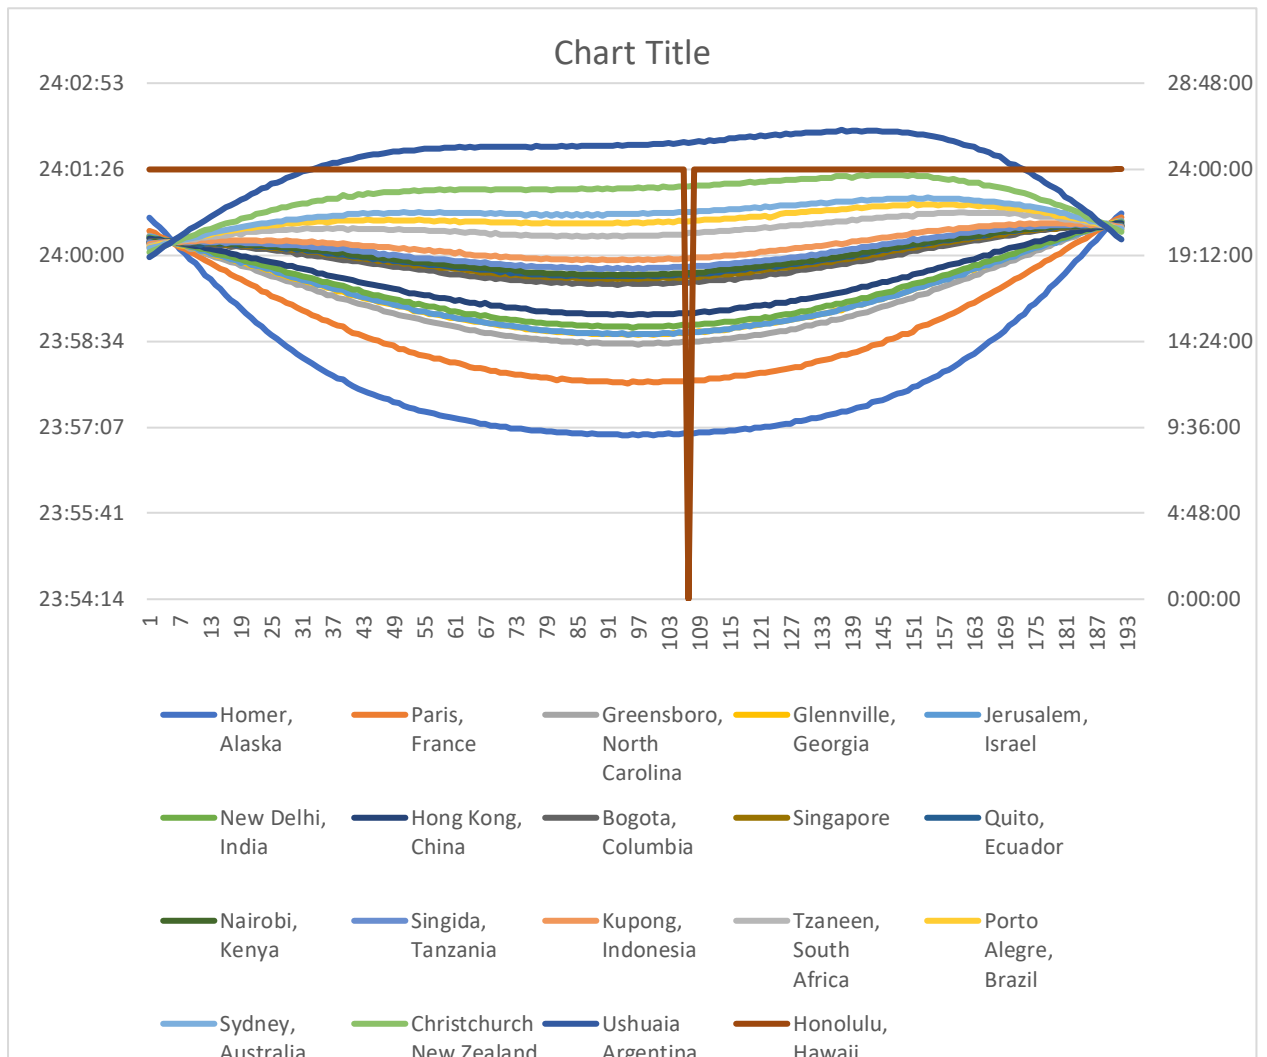

However, there is a silver lining! While I have much more studying to do (the Book of Enoch gives the number of days for eight years), I believe I came away with some significant information.

I learned, contrary to what we're taught, the length of a day fluctuates greatly throughout the course of a year. In my previous study, I learned about the difference between a sidereal day and a solar day, our current measurement. The actual length is neither!

I learned what equal day and night looks like during the time of the equinoxes.

Sorry, one location returned an error when I plotted the graph, and I couldn't fix it myself. I plotted that location on a separate line from all the others.

I learned what happens on the solstices, where the Northern and Southern Hemispheres switch from positive to negative 24-hour days and vice versa.

I came away with more questions than answers, but what this study has revealed is that there a significance to the 364-day Enochian calendar model. How that aligns with the Gregorian calendar and the seasons will take more time to ascertain.

Measuring Sunset & Sunrise

Before beginning the measurement of time, I had to figure out the point at which sunset and sunrise occurs.

Does it begin when the sun touches the horizon?

Middle of horizon?

Or below the horizon, when the last/first vestages of light are visible?

I asked myself, “What would Enoch use?”

The answer lies in the earliest Hebrew alphabet known as the Proto-Sinaitic script, where a picture not only depicts a sound, but also a meaning.

The Qof/Qoph just happens to mean “sun on horizon.”

With this knowledge, I began logging sunset and sunrise times in several locations. Incidentally, Stellarium also uses this ‘middle of the sun’ measurement.

I initially began this study with only a handful of locations; but I realized this wasn't enough to come to a definitive conclusion to satisfy naysayers. I added more locations. I saw anomalies, like Bogota, Columbia, behaving more like the Southern Hemisphere, as far as time was concerned. So, I added even more locations, ending up with nineteen locations, representing different latitudes all over the earth.

The following pages contain my notes and tables pertaining to time. Please keep in mind that there may be anomalies. Due to the measuring capabilities of Stellarium, the measurements noted are not as fluid as what think time should be.

*As per my Enochian calendar study, at the beginning of this time tracking study, I began the year at sunset of the spring equinox. *

* Most locations use UTC time, but I didn't discover this should be the standard for all locations until further in the study when it was too late to change anything. In future studies, I will track all locations using UTC time.

In conclusion, as you can see in the charts, there is no synchronous pattern established across the hemispheres. Therefore, there I cannot in good conscious tell anyone the Enochian Calendar model is the calendar they should be using. However, I arrived at two conclusions.

1. There is more study to do. Tracking the sunset and sunrise times helped me to see where I need to focus my studies for the upcoming calendar season.
2. Sunset ends and begins a day.

How I concluded this:

When I first started this study, I noticed the sunset and sunrise times reversed at various times of the year, going from later to earlier, and vice versa. So, once I completed all the time documentation, I went back and started color coding the anomalies I saw. A pattern arose!

Every single time a reversal in sunset time occurred, it happened in conjunction with a 24-hour time period. It NEVER happened at sunrise, except for one instance in Quito, Ecuador, when all three anomalies took place during the same time period. For all nineteen locations, sometimes two times a year, sometimes four times a year, there was a reversal in time at sunset.

This led me to conclude:

1. There is no time change without sunset.
2. Since there is no time change without sunset, then sunset determines the length of a day.
3. Therefore, sunset ends and begins a day — just like the Bible says it does!

I want to thank everyone for joining me in my studies. There is much more work to be done. It is my firm belief that we can find the way of the Enochian Calendar through careful and diligent study. Stay tuned for the next installment... in about 6 months or so. Shalom!
