The Personality configuration screen (Tomodachi Collection) A personality is a mechanic featured in the Tomodachi series that is used to determine how a Mii behaves in the game. The personality of a Mii is determined by a quiz taken in Mii Maker when they are first created. Their personality can be edited at any time. Tomodachi Collection Personalities are first featured in Tomodachi Collection, featuring four categories: Calm, Cool, Fun, and Dry, with 4 sub-categories for each. Each personality plays a role in interaction with other Mii's. The different personalities of each Mii will determine: How they act Who they get along or do not get along with Who they will have a successful relationship with Their likes and dislikes on certain items (such as clothing and interiors).

A Mii's idle and walking animation depends on what their personality is. For instance, Calm Mii's will sway their arms in a straight motion, while Cool Mii's will stand in a thinking pose. In addition, a Mii's starting interior and pose are affected by what personality they are. For more details see the personality chart. Tomodachi Life Personalities are featured once again in Tomodachi Life, functioning the same way as its predecessor with little to no changes. The only major difference is all of the personalities are renamed in this game, such as Calm being renamed to Easygoing. There are other things added to this game that are also determined by personality, such as the interior design and roof color of a married couple's house. Additionally, when a baby is born, the color of their clothes is determined on the personality they are given, as well as the color of the starting clothes gained after they grow up. For more details see the personality chart. Personality Sub-Pages Note that the Japanese and Korean names are not official. Trivia The personalities are based on the 16 personality types of the Myers-Briggs personality test and ancient Greek four temperaments test. When comparing Tomodachi Life personality types to the Greek Four Temperaments, Outgoing (Energetic) types mostly match the Sanguine temperament, Easygoing match the Phlegmatic temperament, Independent (Reserved) types match the Melancholic temperament, and Confident types are most like the Choleric temperament. In Tomodachi Life, a Mii's pose and walking animation depends on their personality: Outgoing Mii's have a straight standing pose, and will also slightly move their body when walking. (Mii's, regardless of their actual personality may walk this way to sit, or if they have hiccups.) Easygoing Mii's will shake their head and move their arms. They will also move their arms a little when they walk; in the American and European versions, their elbows are bent back a little when they stand but not walk. Those Mii's will also do this when they are in a normal fight. Regardless of their actual personality, Mii's may walk this way around in the Amusement Park. Confident Mii's are exactly the same as Outgoing Mii's except the body movement when they walking (they slouch a little). They can also be this way if they are happy. Independent Mii's will stand in a thinking pose. They walk like Outgoing Mii's but with less arm swinging. Also in Life, a Mii who invites over another Mii to become friends while waiting for the Mii to come to their room depends on the former's personality. Outgoing Mii's will skip in circles, and run to the door when a Mii knocks. Upon opening the door, they will wave very enthusiastically, causing the Mii knocking to be surprised. Easygoing Mii's will sway their arms while waiting for a Mii. When the Mii knocks, they will answer the door. The knocking Mii will wave at them, and the Mii answering the door will jump up enthusiastically. Confident Mii's will wait by the door and answer immediately after a Mii knocks, causing the Mii to be surprised. The Mii answering will wave and welcome them inside. In the Japanese version, the Confident Mii will stand up straight before the door opens and bow to the visiting Mii. Independent Mii's will stay in their thinking pose while waiting for a Mii. When the Mii knocks, they will walk over to the door and answer it. The knocking Mii will wave at them and the answering Mii will then welcome the Mii inside. In Life, the Mii's reaction after calling them back to their apartment is different based off personality. Easygoing Mii's will swing their arms back and forth in a continuous motion (their happy pose). Outgoing Mii's will continuously run in place. Confident Mii's wave at the screen. Independent Mii's also wave at the screen, but not as wide. They also nod while waving. In the Japanese version, they will bow. The animation of a Mii in Tomodachi Life can change depending on their mood and personality. When happy, Easygoing Mii's will swing their arms back and forth, while Outgoing Mii's will swing back and forth with their arms on their chest, and move their arms in a jogging-like motion when moving around in the apartment.

Confident and Independent Mii's will keep their standard pose. When having a happy expression, Easygoing Mii's will act Outgoing for their standing pose, or vice-versa. When angry over a fight, Outgoing Mii's will stomp and pump their fists and place their hands on their hips when moving around in their apartment. Confident Mii's will cross their arms and tap their right foot irritably. They can also slouch and bend their elbows when walking around in their apartment and worried. Easygoing and Independent Mii's will keep their standard pose. When furious, the Mii's will be have their head towards the ground, their arms in an angry fashion, and be shaking slightly. This happens on all personalities, even Independent Mii's. When sad, Outgoing and Confident Mii's will slouch forward, while Easygoing Mii's will have a worried thinking pose. In the Japanese version, Easygoing Mii's instead make a gesture appearing as though they are crying. Independent Mii's will keep their standard pose. When worried, Easygoing and Outgoing Mii's will have a worried thinking pose, having their heads down and their arms crossed around them further. In the Japanese version, the Mii's will make a pose that almost looks like they are crying. Confident Mii's act like Independent Mii's. They can also walk like while fighting. Independent Mii's will keep their standard pose and walking.

Independent Mii's are always in a thinking pose no matter what their mood is, unless they are involved in a huge fight. In Life, a Mii's personality type determines the type of toy a traveler plays with in their tent: Outgoing: Camera Easygoing: Teddy Bear Confident: Book Independent: Journal In Tomodachi Life, if the person stares at the Mii for a long time (when not making funny faces), the Mii's animation while blushing is slightly different. Outgoing Mii's put both hands on their cheeks and shake their heads left to right. Easygoing Mii's put both of their hands on their cheeks. Confident Mii's stay in their current pose. Independent Mii's will revert to their thinking pose. If a love confession is accepted in Western versions, the Mii's happy animation depends on their personality. Outgoing Mii's will twirl happily, or pump their fist then jiggle back and forth in their seat if it takes place at the cafe. Easygoing Mii's will pump their fist. Confident Mii's will spread their arms wide. Independent Mii's will put their hands on cheeks. Following a successful proposal in Western versions, the Mii's happy animation is also based on their personality. Outgoing Mii's will jump up and down, or just pump their fist at the amusement park or restaurant. Easygoing Mii's will dance happily. Confident Mii's will shrug happily. Independent Mii's will put their hands to their face. In the Japanese version of Tomodachi Life, Mii's do not perform a pose when their personality is revealed. The poses the Mii's make when their personalities are revealed differ between the Western and European releases (the quiz on the American website uses the poses from the European version: The poses for Easygoing Softie (Easy-going Softie), Outgoing Entertainer (Energetic Adventurer), Independent Lone Wolf (Reserved Introvert) and Confident Brainiac (Confident Free Spirit) are different in North America. The pose for Easygoing Buddy is used for Outgoing Charmer (Energetic Buddy) in Europe. The pose for Outgoing Charmer is used for Outgoing Trendsetter (Energetic Charmer) in Europe. The pose for Outgoing Trendsetter is used for Outgoing Leader (Energetic Extrovert) in Europe. The pose for Independent Free Spirit is used for Confident Brainiac (Confident Free Spirit) in Europe. The pose for Confident Adventurer is used for Outgoing Entertainer (Energetic Adventurer) in Europe. The poses for Easygoing Softie, Easygoing Buddy (Easy-going Carer), Independent Free Spirit (Reserved Do-Gooder), and Independent Lone Wolf (Reserved Introvert) are different in Europe. The pose for Independent Artist (Reserved Perfectionist) is different than it appears in North America. In the former, they mime drawing with their left hand from top to bottom followed by putting their hands on their hips; in the latter, they draw with their right hand from their chest to their right side, then lean out.); Mii's in Tomodachi Quest will have different skills depending on their personality. Outgoing Mii's have a regular sword attack and a special one that does more damage. Easygoing Mii's have a weaker standard attack, but will be able to heal other party members. Confident Mii's are similar to Outgoing ones, but they have a little more HP and their "special" move is not that strong. They fight with punches and kicks instead of swords. Independent Mii's have little HP and the weakest standard attack, but also a powerful magic spell that never misses and can be used up to 6 times. Baby Mii's will do different animations after their personality has been chosen. Outgoing babies will raise their arms up and down. Easygoing babies will do nothing. Confident babies wiggle around a little. Independent babies will be shown tilting their head to the side.
