

Hey friend

I watched Roosevelt on a date with his daughter on Martin Luther King, Jr day and told him how proud I was of him

It sparked a friendship as he feels alone as a man and needs accountability and friendship. He was in tears watching my dad and I share about our friendship and purpose online and we now are talking weekly.

Speaking of my dad...he is in a fantastic place! He finished the first draft of a men's Bible study of the book of Titus. He is meeting with men every day and disciplining them.

Speaking Encouragement Online

Always thinking outside the box, I joined a Facebook group called Thriving Couples KE that has 200,000 in it. This week I wrote a post that shared vulnerability and honesty about how Erin and I thrive in marriage. Thousands of people read it and I have been able to encourage and engage with many of them.

Pure honesty, we have a passion for our kids and their friends It is why we intentionally spend time with them together and invite their friends in the neighborhood over. This is Laney, Malak, and Elisha last week eating ice cream. Parenting is so humbling and hard at this season, yet entering their world and loving them is the highlight of life.

How are you doing today?
Love life and thrive on through it all.

Brian and Erin Clark

Our purpose to encourage and bridge relationships and resources for leaders, to fulfill their dreams of impacting for good in the world. is happening! Through God's grace, taking risks, dreaming big, and your partnership!
