Iron Bridge (Algoma)

This society, organized in 1887, was one of the first fairs held along the North Shore. Farmers came from as far away as 17 miles with team and wagon to the fair which, at that time, was held across the highway from the present fairgrounds.

Going back (over 60 years), one of the present members recalls that there were many grain exhibits, including Banner oats and Chancellor peas, Beauty of Hebron and Irish Cobbler potatoes.

Field crop competitions have brought in seed better suited to the district in Rodney, Vanguard and Garry oats.

Though heavy horses were numerous in early days, saddle horses and ponies were also popular.

Livestock were tied to fences along the road and sheep placed in small pens. The “ladies’ work” and other exhibits were displayed in the Orange Hall, away from the fairgrounds.

Finally, in 1926, the society purchased about three acres of land from Nelson Warnock and, in the same year, let a contract to Mr. Davidson for $150 to erect a 30 x 60-foot hall. Lumber and other materials were donated or bought by the society. This hall was enlarged to accommodate the school fair. It was where the laneway beside the Esso gas station is today.
