AMRUT PEATED INDIAN SINGLE MALT

FROM THE LAND OF THE GREAT HIMALAYAS

Tasting Notes

Nose : Unusually dry peat; not dissimilar to peat reek absorbed by an old leather armchair; a hint of citrus, too

Taste : Despite the nose, the immediate sensation is one of being caressed by molassed sugar and then a ratcheting up of the peat notes. As they get more forceful, so the experience becomes that little bit drier and spicier, though not without the molasses refusing to give way

Finish : You can tell the quality of the distillate and the barrels it has been matured in by the crystalline depth to the finish. Everything is clear on the palate and the butterscotch vanillas wrap the phenols for a comfortable and clean finale
