THERAPY

Parent-child interaction therapy (PCIT) is a widely used and evidence-based behavioral parent training approach for the treatment of emotional and disruptive behavior disorders in children aged 2 to 7 years old.

During PCIT, therapists coach parents while they interact with their children, teaching the caregivers strategies that will promote positive behaviors in children who have disruptive or externalizing behavior problems.

Research has shown that, as a result of PCIT, parents learn more effective parenting techniques, the behavior problems of children decrease, and the quality of the parent-child relationship improves.

PCIT services are offered at no-cost through our partnership with NWF Health Network. For additional information, please contact our office.
