Fun with philosophy!

P4E in May RAC events

From Noticing to Questions

If you're working with a group who are great at making statements but could use a little help asking questions, here's a fun routine we tried recently at Providence Village (see images above).

The basic move is simple: start with what people notice, turn those observations into questions, then see whether any of those questions can become deeper philosophical questions.

It's simple, playful, and surprisingly powerful.

From Noticing to Moral Reflection:

Moral reflection begins with paying attention. By noticing the people, situations, and moments around us, we can better understand our values, challenge our assumptions, and grow in wisdom and character.

PITL events

Can Inactivity be a Virtue?

Apology, Repair, and Reconciliation

Virtue, Character, and How We Grow

What's coming next?
