

Masked Agenda

(Zachary Denman)

Masks everywhere. People like zombies. I can't see what they're saying – I can't read them. Society has drifted into a coma – a deep sleep. What will become of us?

All I see is subservience: stay in line; walk this way; wear your mask; do not speak; do not leave your house; do not visit your family; stay alert; wash your hands; and keep your distance. You must comply to these rules and do not step out of line.

That was the start of it, but I never thought it could go so far. I've seen the sci-fi films, read it in the Arthur C. Clarke / Philip K. Dick books. But is this actually happening? Is this real? Or is this a simulation?

We think we make our choices. We think we make our decisions. But we don't. Decisions are being made for us. Feels like we are being experimented with – tested on – to see what can become of us. Is our level of consciousness being halted or even... replaced? Are we being stopped from advancing into the greatest vision of ourselves?

The people that rebelled, resisted, or tried to speak, were silenced by the masses and branded as the vermin. Scum. The dirt of society. Anyone who did not comply were taken to outside camps where they were "re-habilitated". Then they stayed in line and no one could think for themselves anymore. People obeyed and the streets became quiet. London was finished and the only life left was the monoliths being built in the city. People walked the streets in search of happiness, but it was all broken, destroyed, annihilated.

When the masks were introduced no one knew where this was leading – we were tricked and silenced. Where do we go from here? Are we just going to be carried along the conveyer belt and slowly suffocated without any second thought, questioning or resistance?

All we see now are our four walls and the government dictatorship voicing itself through a screen – telling us how to live our lives every day. Humanity is finished – over.

Implementing technology into the human body is the next agenda – natural evolution has come to an end. There is no choice and it's the only way forward. They said it would all get back to normal after the vaccine, but little changed – it just got worse.

Our society is being destroyed, and it will never recover from this oppression.

Maybe others know but haven't spoken yet. Maybe there is alliances forming. Maybe aliens are going to save us. Maybe the world is run by aliens. Am I alien?

What am I doing here? Who am I? What is this place? I don't recognise it anymore. The world was never meant to go back to "normal", and the word "normal" never existed anyway.

Society has always hidden behind the mask, but now we have the excuse to wear one. What's the future?
