The Power Tool.

Racquetball is a power struggle. And the Impact One™ racquet helps you come out on top. AMF Voit designed it to translate experience and control into kill shots on the courts. Every feature we put into it plays up to you. And then some.

Impact One is shaped for power with a unique modified teardrop frame of light-weight aluminum. It puts more weight behind the hitting area and gives you a larger sweet spot. Yet it weighs in at only 267 grams.

And the Impact One has a feature you won't find on any other racquet—a floating nylon throat. It's not absolutely rigid, so you actually feel the power of your shots.

Our proportional stringing gives you the consistent response you need in the clutch. And we've even stitched on the head bumper, so it won't slide around and knock your swing off balance.

Make a power play. Check out AMF Voit's Impact One and our other top-of-the-line products, before you play your next game.

DAVE PECK, 26
ranked number one at the end of the 1981-82 season

HOMETOWN: El Paso, Texas
SPONSOR: Ektelon
BORN: November 21, 1956
Right-Handed Power Player

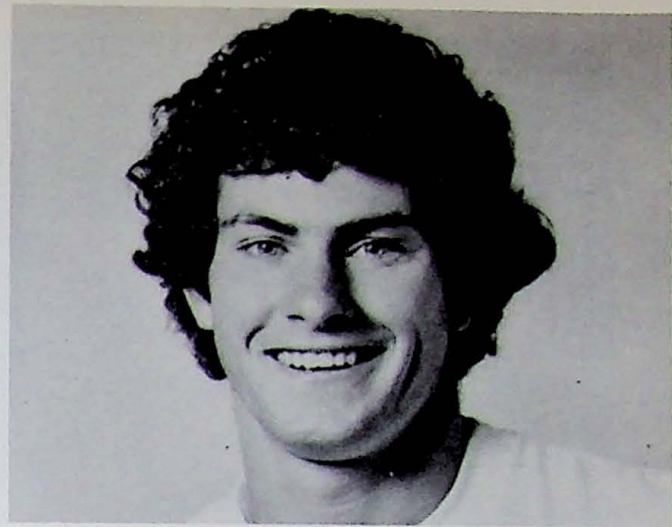

The first man to take away Marty Hogan's top seeded ranking in five years, Dave Peck is the brightest star on the professional racquetball circuit at the present time and is considered to be one of the strongest players ever to swing a racquet.

Heavily favored to defeat Hogan in last spring's DP LEACH NATIONAL CHAMPIONSHIP, victory eluded the husky Texan as Hogan took three out of four victories from Peck to win his fifth straight national title, tying Peck with four tournament wins on the season.

Peck is a former middle linebacker for the University of Texas-El Paso who didn't start playing racquetball until six years ago. His first year on the pro circuit was 1978-79, when he was named "Rookie of the Year" for his outstanding play. For the third straight year, Peck has been ranked no lower than number two and is consistently one of the game's top competitors and money winners. He won $39,250 on the officially sanctioned 1981-82 season.

A crowd pleaser on the court as well as off, Peck is known for his uncanny quickness and his awesome 100 mph backhand killshot. He will definitely be knocking on the championship door again this season.

MARTY HOGAN, 24
five-time defending national champion, ranked number two 1981-82

HOMETOWN: St. Louis, Missouri
 RESIDENCE: San Diego, California
 SPONSORS: DP LEACH INDUSTRIES,
 CATALINA, NIKE
 BORN: January 22, 1958
 Right-Handed Power Player

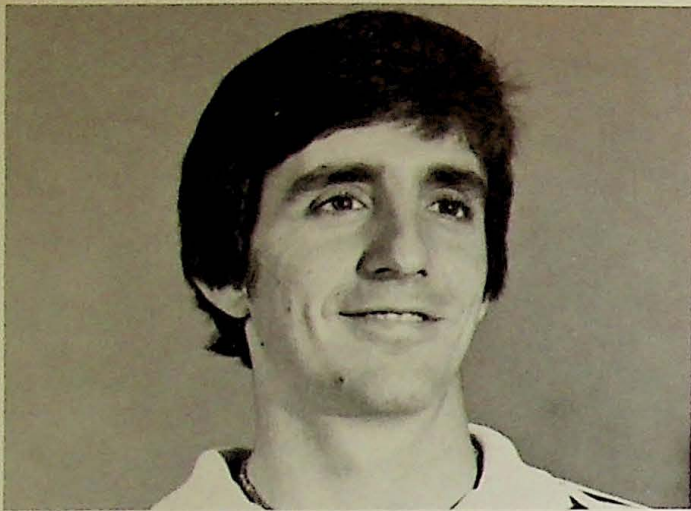

Marty Hogan is to pro racquetball what Babe Ruth was to baseball, George Mikan to basketball and Red Grange to football; he will go down in the sports history books as a pioneer of his craft and one of the most dominant figures in his sport with records few will ever break.

No other player held onto the number one ranked position longer, won more tournaments, made more money and dominated the game like Marty Hogan. Winning his fifth straight national championship last June in Palatine, Hogan is eagerly looking forward to going for a sixth unprecedented national crown this season.

Pro racquetball's only millionaire, Hogan is the game's richest player, winning more than $600,000 in prize money and signing the most lucrative sponsor contracts in the sport.

For the past six years, Hogan has led the way for professionals, changing the game from one of defense and control to his own brand of offense and power. Though he won four of the 10 sanctioned events during the 1981-82 season and lost his number one seed ranking to Dave Peck, no one should think for a minute the master has lost his touch, for Hogan is still considered the "King of Swing" in the world of professional racquetball.

JERRY HILECHER, 28, RANKED FOURTH NATIONALLY AFTER 1981-82 SEASON

HOMETOWN: St. Louis, Missouri

RESIDENCE: Encinitas, California

SPONSOR: Independent

BORN: July 20, 1954

Right-Handed Power Player

Coming off one of his best seasons ever, Hilecher increased his national standing by one spot from fourth place in 1980-81 to third place after the 1981-82 season.

Hilecher has the distinction of being the only professional in the nation who has performed in every sanctioned pro event since the tour began in 1973. He is a consistent finisher in the quarterfinals and above and is considered one of the sports premiere power players.

Hilecher won two major tournaments last season, the opener for the Catalina Series at Westminster, upsetting Hogan and Yellen and then the second tournament of the season, the Catalina-Canadian Broadcasting Classic in Winnipeg, Man., Canada.

Hilecher is in the top three for all-time prize money winnings. He's done television commentary on racquetball and is a regular contributor to major racquetball magazines and newspapers around the nation.

Known for his fearless pursuit of the ball, Hilecher is a tall, quick, strong, no-nonsense player who is never taken lightly by any of his fellow professionals. Considered one of racquetball's "senior citizens" at 28, Hilecher is one of the game's fastest and most athletic players, putting most of the younger players through their paces when they come up against him.

Bret Harnett is being called the Marty Hogan of the 1980s, as this lanky youngster from Las Vegas moves up the professional ladder from number 11 during the 1980-81 season to number four in the 1981-82 season.

Winner of the $15,000 Lone Star Pro-Am in Austin, Tex., last April, Harnett was one of only four pros to win a major pro event last season. Graduating from high school last spring, Harnett collected $15,000 in tournament winnings and a great deal of respect from his fellow peers. He defeated Dave Peck two of three meetings during the season and played national champion Marty Hogan to a near-defeat in Honolulu.

An easy-going, polite young man, Harnett is considered to be one of the strongest and most talented of the new corps of touring professionals and certainly has the potential to be a new, dominating champion in years to come.

Hogan calls Harnett "the most refreshing competition I've seen in years; I really have to be on my toes when I play him because he'll beat you!"

Harnett was honored last season by winning the "Most Improved Player" and the "Best Sportsmanship" Awards, both of which tell a lot about the youngster and what his fellow players and the officials think of him.

BRET HARNETT, 18, RANKED THIRD NATIONALLY AFTER 1981-82 SEASON

HOMETOWN: Las Vegas, Nevada

SPONSOR: DP LEACH INDUSTRIES

BORN: May 20, 1964

Left-Handed Power Control Player

MIKE YELLEN, 22, RANKED FIFTH NATIONALLY
AFTER THE 1981-82 SEASON

HOMETOWN: Southfield, Michigan

SPONSOR: Ektelon

BORN: February 20, 1960

Right-Handed Power-Control Player

The 1981-82 season was not kind to Mike Yellen, as it was the first in several that he failed to win a major tournament on the sanctioned professional tour.

But Yellen is still one of the premiere pro players on the tour, winning $15,500 and consistently finishing in the quarterfinals and above at nearly every stop.

Yellen is a consistent control player who continually picks up power as the season progresses. He emphasizes passing, pinch and cross court kill shots. Yellen is known as the game's best pinch player, and has a powerful backhand.

Yellen learned the game of racquetball at the Southfield Athletic Club where he worked as a towel boy during his high school years. An early claim to fame was beating the club professional where he worked . . . Al Kaline, the famed Detroit Tigers outfielder and Hall of Fame member.

Yellen's best money showing during this past season was making it to the semifinal round of the $70,000 DP LEACH NATIONAL CHAMPIONSHIPS where he lost to Marty Hogan, taking home $5,000.

One of the few players to maintain his previous season's ranking, number six ranked Rick Wagner was the foil of foils during the 1981-82 season, playing in nearly every quarterfinal or semifinal match at all sanctioned events last season, making the finals twice.

Although tournament victory has eluded Wagner, he remains one of the game's top competitors and most respected players. He came close to upsetting top seeded Dave Peck in the semifinal round of the DP LEACH NATIONAL CHAMPIONSHIPS last June but a twisted knee forced him to forfeit the match in the fifth game.

After an operation this summer and a period of rehabilitation, Wagner is once again on the comeback trail. He had missed several important events during the 1979-80 season after being ranked number two the previous year. An automobile accident forced him to endure a period of recovery which he didn't fully make until the beginning of last season. Wagner was named the "Comeback Player of 1980-81" by the National Racquetball Club.

Entering his eighth pro tour season, Wagner is one of the best-liked and most talented players in active competition and should be counted upon to give another great run at top prize money.

RICH WAGNER, 27, RANKED SIXTH NATIONALLY
AFTER THE 1981-82 SEASON

HOMETOWN: Paterson, New Jersey

RESIDENCE: San Diego, California

SPONSOR: DP Leach Industries

BORN: February 11, 1956

Right-Handed Control Player

CRAIG McCOY, 26, RANKED SEVENTH NATIONALLY
AFTER THE 1981-82 SEASON

HOMETOWN: Riverside, California

SPONSOR: DP Leach Industries

BORN: February 20, 1957

Left-Handed Control Player

Known as "Howdy" to his friends, Craig McCoy has a way of turning disappointing and somewhat dismal seasons into excitement and money.

McCoy ended up facing Marty Hogan two years ago in the final round of the DP LEACH NATIONAL CHAMPIONSHIPS in Tempe, Arizona, after systematically eliminating the likes of Dave Peck and Don Thomas. That was typical of McCoy, who doesn't really get all that excited until he the going gets tough. He is considered the game's most talented and athletically gifted players. One of two left-handers on the pro tour, McCoy can be deadly accurate, much to the dismay of the higher ranked professionals. Very few players enjoy playing McCoy because they never know how to defense him.

McCoy came to prominence his first year on the pro tour by teaming with pioneer Charlie Brumfield to take the National Doubles Championship in 1978.

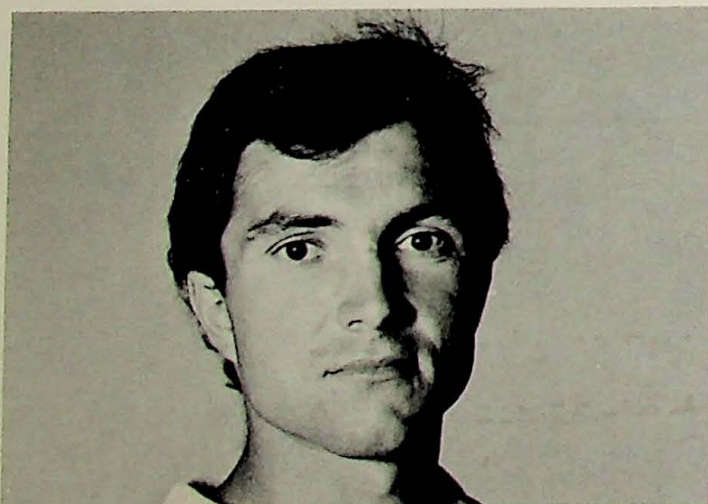

Any player taking McCoy for granted, quickly finds himself on the losing end against one of the profession's most formidable players.

Known as "a real gentleman" in professional racquetball circles, Don Thomas has established himself as one of the best-liked, most consistent players in the game today.

Though he didn't finish as high this past season as he did the previous year (fifth), Thomas is still one of the most aggressive players on the tour. Honored as the most improved player on the 1979-80 pro tour, Thomas jumped from the 19th seeded position to fifth where he remained for two seasons.

Thomas is consistently one of the game's best control players, forcing his opponents to his sort of play. He was an outstanding all-around athlete at Mesa High School and later attended Mesa Community College near Phoenix. He presently lives with his wife and small daughter in El Cajon, east of San Diego.

Don Thomas can be counted upon to be in the money again this year as the 1982-83 season gets underway. He's still working hard toward getting that first tournament victory . . . something he feels is long overdue.

DON THOMAS, 25, RANKED EIGHTH NATIONALLY
AFTER THE 1981-82 SEASON

HOMETOWN: Mesa, Arizona

RESIDENCE: El Cajon, California

SPONSOR: DP Leach Industries

BORN: March 9, 1957

Right-Handed Power-Control Player

SCOTT HAWKINS, 21, RANKED 9th NATIONALLY
AFTER THE 1981-82 SEASON

HOMETOWN: Santa Clara, California

SPONSOR: Ektelon

BORN: December 15, 1960

Right-Handed Power Player

Coming into the top 10 rankings late during the 1980-81 season, Hawkins managed to stay within the 10 top professional rankings again this past season even though he was an alternate player on the Catalina team and did not play in all of the 10 sanctioned pro events.

Hawkins' only tournament victory during the past two seasons came in February of 1981 when he won the Maple Leaf Classic in Windsor, Ontario, a non-sanctioned pro event. Hawkins is a solid quarter and semi-finalist contender and is considered one of the strongest and most competitive of the younger players.

Before entering the pro ranks two years ago, Hawkins was the undisputed junior racquetball player in the country, winning the Racquetball Junior Grand Slam in 1980. He scored four victories in four consecutive national juniors championships in 1978, including the USRA National Junior Championship, the IRA National Junior Championship, the Canadian National Junior Championship and the IRA National Junior Doubles Championship.

When not competing in pro racquetball, Hawkins attends college near his home in Santa Clara, majoring in business administration.

Being the younger brother of top-seeded Dave Peck has its advantages and disadvantages, but the pluses outweigh the minuses by a long way because much of what Gregg Peck knows about professional racquetball, he's learned from his brother-coach Dave Peck.

Just finishing his freshman year at the University of Texas, young Gregg has made a steady rise to the top 10 in professional racquetball, using his six-foot, one-inch frame to his advantage. Ranked 13th after his rookie season two years ago, Gregg got off to a slow start last season but finished strong near the end.

During the rookie season, Gregg managed one of the biggest upsets in racquetball history when he toppled Marty Hogan in the quarterfinal round in Omaha in 1980. Gregg was the 1981 U.S. Open Runner-up to champion Ed Andrews.

GREGG PECK, 18, RANKED 10th AFTER THE 1981-82 SEASON

DOUG COHEN, 19

HOMETOWN: St. Louis, Missouri

SPONSOR: Head

BORN: February 20, 1962

Right-Handed Serve & Shoot Player

The 1979-80 Rookie of the Year, Cohen jumped 23 places to finish the season ranked ninth at the beginning of the 1980-81 season, the greatest improvement on the tour that year.

Cohen earned the DP Leach/Seamco Scholarship Award last season. He is a right-hander who made the quarterfinals twice beating Dave Bledsoe in Westminster and Jerry Hilecher in Beverly, Mass.

Out of high school three years, he joined fellow professional Marty Hogan as one of several successful pro racquetball players who learned the game and developed their skill at the Jewish Community Center in St. Louis, Mo.

Cohen is a serve and shoot player with good hustle and power. He remains a strong player and formidable opponent for every player he meets.

At 33, Strandemo has assumed the "senior citizen" role on the 1981-82 pro racquetball tour, but don't let age fool you as he is one of the most consistent performers who is nearly always in the quarterfinal round of most tournaments.

He chalked up seven semifinal showings out of nine events during the 1979-80 season, owning a fifth or sixth ranking during most of that season.

A charter member of the pro racquetball tour which began in 1973, he was runner-up to Charlie Brumfield in the 1975 National Championship and won the first stop of the 1977-78 season after beating Marty Hogan.

He is probably the busiest pro during the off-season holding a series of training camps throughout the country, making him one of the most recognizable racquetball players in the nation.

Strandemo is one of the few control players left on the tour and his experience gives him a decided advantage against younger and stronger players.

JOHN EGERMAN, 19

HOMETOWN: Boise, Idaho

SPONSOR: Ektelon

BORN: July 25, 1962

Right-Handed Power-Control Player

Egerman has managed to consistently reach the quarterfinals of nearly all the tournaments he appeared in during the 1980-81 pro tour. Only the top-ranked players stopped Egerman during the last few tournaments of last season — Hilecher in El Paso; Mike Yellen in St. Louis; Yellen again at the Ektelon-Perrier Championship in Anaheim. His major victory last year was at the Portland Pro-Am in April when he beat fifth-ranked Don Thomas in two games to win the tournament.

Egerman has the strength to play a power game and keep a good pace, yet he has the ability to change-up and control a slower paced game. He has developed an all-round consistent game where he is much more methodical about his shots and has decreased his number of unforced errors.

Egerman learned the game of racquetball after being repeatedly ejected from the swimming pool at the Boise YMCA for "skylarking." The racquetball court director noticed Egerman had a talent for hitting a racquetball and slowly developed him into one of the top 10 pros in the world.

Ed Andrews is considered one of the most feared opponents in any tournament. The tall, smooth stroking Andrews combined power and control while sweeping to his best year in 81-82 including a solid win over Hogan in the Ektelon Pony National Championships.

Andrews is a five time National Amateur Champion with the 80 Ektelon Perrier Singles Title, 80 AARA Singles title, 81 AARA and USRA Singles title and 81 AARA Doubles title with Mark Martino.

Deservedly, Andrews has won an alternate position on the DP/Leach/Catalina Racquetball Series.

Next time you go to court, we'd like to put a loaded gun in your hand. At least that's what your opponent will think when you show up with our Graphite 240.

It's made of fiberglass wrapped by smokin' graphite, so it's light as well as strong. But that's not the Graphite 240's best feature, it's unique head shape is. This racquet sports a diamond head shape which enlarges the power spot on the face of your racquet. So racquetballs explode off its strings like bullets. And by the time they hit the wall they look like BB's. Oh, it'll drive your opponents insane.

So why don't you pick up a Graphite 240. Before they outlaw it.
