CLIENT RIGHTS AND RESPONSIBILITIES

The following information is important to note as you begin your counseling relationship with the Pittsburgh Pastoral Institute (PPI). If you have additional questions or concerns, do not hesitate to discuss them with your counselor or call the Institute at one of the above numbers.

Services and Staff

PPI is an interfaith counseling agency that integrates into the counseling process resources from the behavioral sciences and a client's religious faith, when so desired. This reflects PPI's commitment to serving the whole person—body, mind, and spirit. In addition, our services build on the strengths and resilience of individuals, families, and communities to improve the health, wellness, and quality of life of all those whom it serves. Various counseling modalities are available, including individual, couple, family, and group therapy.

All PPI counselors hold graduate-level degrees, licenses, or certifications in one or more of the mental health disciplines, including: Pastoral Counseling, Social Work, Marriage and Family Therapy, Clinical Psychology, and Professional Counseling. All PPI counselors adhere to the Standards and Code of Ethics of the American Association of Pastoral Counselors.

Treatment Approach

While every counseling relationship is unique, your counselor is dedicated to providing a safe, secure, and empathic relationship in which to explore, understand, and, as far as possible, help resolve your difficulties and concerns. As a client at PPI, you have the right to:

1. Be treated with dignity and respect.
2. Participate in the planning of your counseling process and goals.
3. Understand clearly the nature and cost of the process.
4. Give informed consent to all aspects of the process.
5. Terminate your counseling at will.

In addition, you may request a consultation with a PPI psychiatrist to discuss medical questions or concerns that might relate to your counseling, or to consider medication to help alleviate extreme feelings of depression or anxiety. Because PPI is primarily a counseling (rather than a psychiatric) resource, clients receiving medication through PPI must also see a PPI therapist on a regular basis.

Emergencies

In case of an emergency, your counselor (or a counselor on call) can be reached at any time of the day or night by dialing PPI's main number at 412-661-1239 (or 1-877-661-9623) and following the emergency instructions. You also can reach your County Crisis Line at the corresponding number below, or you can receive immediate assistance by going to your nearest hospital emergency room.

Confidentiality

Communication between you and your counselor is noted and kept in a confidential file. In general, and unless you sign a release form, the information in your file cannot be shared with anyone who is not directly involved in your treatment. In cases of couple or family counseling, all participants over the age of 18 must authorize this release. There is a reasonable copying charge for releasing information at your request.

All use, disclosure, and accessing of personal medical information is federally regulated by the Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act (HIPAA). The packet of information you have received contains a Notice of Privacy Practices, which is a detailed summary of the provisions of this law. You are entitled to read it before signing any consent forms at PPI.

HIPAA does mandate some exceptions to absolute confidentiality. These include:

1. PPI's right to use or disclose any medical information that is required for purposes of carrying out treatment and related health-care operations, and for obtaining payment for services.
2. The requirement that PPI counselors share with the proper authorities information regarding: reports or actions of suicidal or homicidal intent; evidence of child abuse; and situations of life-threatening medical emergency. In such instances, your consent is not required.

Beyond those restrictions stipulated in HIPAA, you may request additional restrictions on the use and disclosure of your medical information. PPI will cooperate as far as possible, but is not required to agree to such requests. Where there is agreement, however, the restriction will be binding on PPI.

Your therapy file and the information in it are the property of PPI; however, you have the right to review and discuss your file with your counselor, or to request a copy (at a reasonable charge).

Completion or Termination of Counseling

By voluntarily agreeing to treatment, you also have the right to terminate services at any time, even if this is against professional advice. Generally, your counseling at PPI is considered completed when you have accomplished your treatment goals or you believe that continued counseling will be of no further help. In either case, please discuss this decision with your counselor in advance of your final session.

This allows time to explore issues related to ending counseling and providing closure.

Keeping appointments is an essential part of the counseling process. Therefore, undue cancellations or missed appointments are grounds for discontinuing services. You are encouraged to discuss with your therapist his or her scheduling policy and to address any anticipated scheduling problems. As noted in your fee agreement, nonpayment of fees also is grounds for termination, or at least for a temporary discontinuation of service.

As an outpatient treatment facility, PPI is not equipped to deal effectively with certain types and levels of problems. These include: active alcohol or drug addiction; persistent suicidal or homicidal impulses, intents, or actions; and the management of certain types and doses of medication. In these or other cases in which PPI is neither an effective nor a suitable resource for your concerns, your counselor will discuss with you the advisability or the necessity of seeking help in a more appropriate setting.

As a client of PPI, you are expected to refrain from physical violence toward your counselor, PPI personnel, or other clients. Any such threat or act of violence is grounds for immediate termination of your relationship with PPI.

Waiting Room Courtesy

Because the waiting room is small and exposed, it is important to be considerate of other clients' privacy and the need for as quiet and as undisturbed a space as possible. Children may not be left unattended in the waiting room, unless they can supervise themselves and respect the needs and rights of other clients. PPI staff cannot supervise children in the waiting room.

Feedback, Complaints, and Grievances

Our ultimate goal at PPI is to enhance your health and well-being to the greatest extent possible, and to continually improve the quality and effectiveness of our services. Toward this end, confidential questionnaires are sent periodically to all clients. We welcome your candid feedback, both positive and negative.

Each counseling relationship is unique and unfolds in its own time and way. Occasionally, a client and counselor are unable to establish an effective level of rapport. If you should sense that this is the case, do not hesitate to discuss it with your counselor. He or she will help you decide if the differences can be resolved or if you would find it more helpful to see someone else.

Similarly, if you should have a complaint or grievance about your counseling experience at PPI, you are encouraged to discuss the issue with your counselor, who will work with you for a satisfactory resolution. If the complaint or grievance cannot be settled with your counselor, or if you do not feel it is appropriate to discuss it with him or her, you may call Patricia Campbell, our executive director (412-661-1239).

Nondiscrimination of Service

At PPI, admissions, the provision of services, and referrals of clients are made without regard to race, color, religious creed, disability, ancestry, national origin, age, sex, or sexual orientation.
