Canadian Arcott

The Canadian Arcott was one of the three breeds developed at the Agriculture Canada research station near Ottawa. Canadian Arcotts were the result of a cross-breeding program that included Ile de France and Suffolk to produce a new breed with strong meat characteristics. The mature sheep is medium-sized, short and thick. The lambs are fast-growing, meaty animals that finish well for either the light or heavy lamb market. They produce an excellent carcass with a good meat-to-bone ratio. The ewes are easy lambers and require low to medium maintenance. They adapt well to either pasture or confinement management systems. The rams make excellent terminal sires to improve the meat characteristics of many other breeds.

The Canadian Arcott is one of three breeds developed at the Agriculture Canada research station near Ottawa. The Canadian Arcott is the result of a crossbreeding program including Île de France and Suffolk with the aim of producing a new breed with good beef characteristics. Adult sheep are medium in size, short and thick. Lambs are fast-growing, butcher-type animals for the light or heavy lamb market. They produce an excellent carcass with a good meat yield. Sheep lambs easily and require relatively little care. They adapt well to pasture or to intensively managed confinement systems. Males make excellent terminal rams to improve the meat characteristics of many other breeds.

CHAROLLAIS

The Charollais were developed in the same region of France as Charolais cattle. Beginning in 1977, the Charollais was further improved in the UK and was exported to Canada as embryos, in 1994. The primary purpose of the breed in Canada is as a terminal sire for prime slaughter lamb production. The lambs have an excellent carcass with a wide long loin and a high lean meat yield. Charollais rams are ideal for using on ewe lambs or smaller framed ewes. The smaller head and wedge-shaped body produce lambs that are easily delivered and vigorous at birth. The ewes work well in a pasture-based or confinement system, lamb easily and are good mothers. The fleece of the purebred is of medium quality.

DORSET

The Polled Dorset originated from a mutation of the Horned Dorset which occurred at North Carolina State University in the early 1950s. They were accepted into the US breed registry in 1956 and since that time have spread into Canada and become a major contributor to the commercial lamb industry. Dorset ewes are relatively prolific, good mothers and breed out of season. The breed adapts well to confinement and is readily used in accelerated crossbreeding programs. As they respond well to confinement, they do well under feedlot conditions and on small holdings with intensive management.

General Appearance - Medium-sized sheep; good body length & muscle conformation. The Head is well covered with wool on the poll & under jaws. Open, smooth face & muzzle is moderately broad, medium-length; pink nose.

Ile de France

This breed was developed in the 1830s and was first registered in 1892. Since 1933 they have been performance tested and have had their own test station since 1972. It is the dominant breed in France and was first imported to Canada in 1995. The Ile de France has been selected for two primary purposes: as a terminal sire to produce vigorous, hardy, and fast-growing lambs with superior carcass traits; and as an improver for crossbreeding with maternal breeds in a commercial flock. In this capacity, they add hardiness, longevity, feed conversion and out-of-season breeding ability to a ewe flock. They have an excellent flocking instinct and are very successful when raised on pasture. Their high wool quality is an asset when crossed with range breeds.

This breed was developed during the 1830s and was first registered in 1892. Since 1933 they have been evaluated on their growth performance and have had their own testing station since 1972. It is the dominant breed in France and she was imported to Canada in 1995. Île de France was chosen for two purposes: as a terminal ram to produce vigorous, hardy and high-growing lambs with superior carcass characteristics and as an improver ram for crossbreeding with maternal breeds in a commercial herd. Added to these qualities are vigour, longevity, good feed conversion and the ability to reproduce in the off-season. They have excellent herd instincts and are very successful when raised on pasture.

N O R T H C O U N T R Y

The North Country Cheviot is a breed that has been widely used in the north of England and Scotland for several centuries. They are independent sheep, strong-willed, vigorous and very hardy in harsh climates and rough pasture. They are best suited to pasture-based systems where the management is not intensive. The ewes exhibit superior mothering instincts and deliver lambs easily. The lambs are vigorous at birth with excellent survivability. Although they only demonstrate an average rate of gain, the carcass quality is very good with an above-average yield percentage. North Country rams are often used in crossbreeding programs to pass on the maternal strengths of the breed as well as to produce desirable carcasses.

SUFFOLK

The Suffolk was developed in the early 1800s in the southeastern area of England by crossing the Southdown and the Norfolk Horned sheep. The breed came to Canada in 1888 and interest in the breed grew rapidly after 1920. More than eighty years later it is still one of the dominant breeds in the Canadian industry.

Because Suffolk lambs exceed all other breeds in the rate of gain and respond well to confinement, they offer excellent economic returns and continue to dominate the heavy lamb market in Canada. The rams are widely used as terminal sires in commercial ewe flocks due to their ability to produce lambs with excellent growth and carcass traits. The Suffolk is, however, a heavy feeder and maintaining a moderate size sheep under more controlled management systems has been advantageous in exploiting their meat traits in an economically efficient manner.

TEXEL

The Texel is a meat sheep that produces a lean, well-muscled and high-yielding carcass. Developed on the island of Texel off the coast of Holland in the early 1800s, the breed was imported into Canada in the 1980s. Since that time, the breed has grown to make a significant contribution to the country's prime lamb trade. This has mainly been done through the use of Texel rams as terminal sires in commercial crossbreeding programs. Although the ewes have only average prolificacy, they are very docile and easily managed. They adapt well to either pasture-based or feedlot style management and show excellent feed conversion in all systems.

 Wright's Penny 7J a definite favorite, and one we really shouldn't be parting with but when you get one opportunity to make a first impression, you better make it a good one! This ewe is a high performing, balanced ewe with a very attractive look. Penny combines the refinement and femininity in her head and neck that we strive for, but explodes into a long made, stout bodied ewe with tons of muscle and shape. Penny is a very nice natured easy to handle ewe and has been exposed to Wright's Ace 2J October 1, 2021.

This ewe lamb was born with a 9.5 lb birth weight - she is very structurally correct and well muscled. She has all the characteristics of a good replacement ewe: from a maternal line with prolificacy, lambing ease, and consistent birth weights. She also displays an excellent rate of gain. She was exposed this summer and was marked via chalk harness for mid February lambing. Current weight as of November 6th is 152 lbs. Joy is fully vaccinated with Glanvac 6, dewormed and the flock was tested in 2021 as Johnes negative.

This ewe lamb goes back to two great old Sawyer ewes, one on the top and one on the bottom of her pedigree, and her dam is AI-sired by the foundation ram Canadian Arc 559X. Her being a single is not a concern, as her mother lambs every 8 months; Candy 945G lambed last September, then in May, and is currently pregnant to AI for January 4. Productive lines!

Wright's Black Jack 18J is a stout made, high performing Ram prospect. His balanced, functional look combined with structural soundness sets him apart from his birthing group. Black Jack has a nice masculine head and a wide muzzle. Black Jack's mother is a moderate, stout, easy keeping ewe that has a ton of milk and very good feet and legs. Look to Black Jack to add performance and eye appeal to your next lamb crop.
