

February 2018

Two and a half years ago ZeroWater decided to engage with the fitness industry. We believed who better to promote the need to stay hydrated than certified trainers and fitness experts.

I met Kelly Mac at IDEA in Anaheim and was immediately impressed with her qualifications and many certifications. More importantly I was impressed with the way she conducted and presented herself.

Kelly totally understood the need to stay hydrated before and after working out and she was impressed with our patented filters that remove 99.6% of dissolved solids from drinking water. It was clear to me that Kelly embodies what it is to live a healthy life style therefore, shortly after IDEA I signed Kelly up to be ZeroWater's very first Fitness Ambassador. Since that time Kelly has worked at our booth at industry trade shows as well as Fitness Expo's. We even used Kelly in a lifestyle photoshoot with all our products. Those images can be found on just about every e-commerce site that carries ZeroWater including but not limited to: Amazon.com, Target.com, Wal-Mart.com, Kohls.com, Bestbuy.com and HomeDepot.com.

Kelly spent a lot of time learning about our products and technology. She is passionate about the benefits of ZeroWater. She totally believes in ZeroWater and has been an excellent spokesperson for us. I am excited to see her social media presence growing and am excited for her new app. As Kelly's following grows so will ZeroWater's exposure. I highly recommend Kelly to any company looking for a dedicated, highly qualified, professional person to represent them.

Robert K. Roney

A handwritten signature in black ink that reads 'RK Roney' with a long, sweeping underline.

Vice President of Worldwide Sales